Leading in multidisciplinary opportunities…

The Bachelor's of General Studies (BGS) degree program provides a non-specialized education which allows you the flexibility to develop a multidisciplinary course of study to meet your specific goals for a college degree. The degree is designed for those students who…

- Are undecided or want to explore academic and career options before declaring a major course of study.
- Are seeking to design a program tailored to their educational and professional goals.
- Want to apply previously earned college credits toward the completion of a four-year degree.
- Want to complete a degree at their own pace.

Curriculum

The BGS degree allows you maximum flexibility in creating your course of study, and you hold the major responsibility for your choice of courses. The key to success is careful planning of course work. Your adviser can help you plan a workable course of study from a variety of classes offered at University of Idaho Coeur d'Alene and from numerous courses available on the Web.

Minor and Certificate Programs

In addition to pursuing a Bachelor's of General Studies degree, students may satisfy requirements for minors and/or certificate programs. Adding these options to your degree can increase your marketability and earning potential. Minor and certificate programs are available at the University of Idaho Coeur d'Alene and on the Web. An adviser can assist you in course planning.
