Adult, Career and Technology Education Programs | www.cda.uidaho.edu

Adult, Career and Technology Education ... Leading those in high demand.

Adult, career and technology education programs prepare leaders, managers, teachers and technologists to work effectively with today's adults, organizations and youth. Theoretically and empirically informed, these programs emphasize practical application critical for success in public and private employment settings.

Professional-Technical and Technology Education (PTTE)

Bachelor's, Master's and Education Specialist

The Professional-Technical and Technology Education option is designed for teachers in professional-technical schools and secondary trade and industry programs who do not hold degrees, as well as for trainers, technicians and trade persons. It does not qualify one for teaching in the public K-12 system unless a person also holds a secondary endorsement or a professional-technical specialist certificate. Master's degrees only are available to those who have a four-year degree.

Adult, Organizational Learning and Leadership (AOLL)

Master's and Education Specialist

Emphases available in Human Resource Development or Professional-Technical Technology

The Adult , Organizational Learning and Leadership graduate program at the University of Idaho is designed to provide students with a dynamic, inquiry-based graduate education in the areas of adult and organizational learning and behavior, teaching and training, and ethical and mindful leadership.
