Ties to the Land: Your Family Forest Heritage

Planning for an Orderly Transition - Intergenerational Family Forest Project

Millions of acres of family-owned forest land (and agricultural and rangelands) in the U.S. will change hands in the next few years. Some forests and other rural lands may be converted to a different use because owners didn't take charge of the succession process in time. There are many reasons for this:

- Landowners may have a strong desire to pass their land on to their children but have not yet done the work necessary to ensure that result.
- Many landowners haven't talked to their children about who will take care of the family forest after they're gone.
- Some owners have realized their children may lack the skills to manage the family land or may not be interested in doing so.
- Others assume that succession planning will be too expensive, and they aren't sure what the benefits will be.
- Other owners wait for the children to take the initiative. Or maybe they just don't know what to do next.

If any of these describe your situation, this workshop is for YOU!
