Character and Fitness

The College of Law considers matters of character in determining an applicant's fitness for the study of law. Training in the law and our legal system imposes obligations on the student to maintain the highest values of integrity and moral character. These obligations are essential for all those who study the law, and particularly for those who might seek admission to the bar for the practice of law. The bar authority in each state carefully investigates an applicant's character and fitness to practice law. If you feel that there is an incident in your past that might be of sufficient importance to prevent you from admission to the practice of law, you should consult with the bar admission authorities of the state(s) in which you might practice.

It is essential that you answer each of the following questions completely, truthfully, and without evasion of any kind, as failure to do so will be considered a deliberate misrepresentation and may result in revocation of admission, suspension, or dismissal from law school. It will also be reported to the appropriate bar authorities and may prevent you from sitting for the bar examination. When in doubt, err on the side of full disclosure.

Answers to the following questions will be treated by the College of Law as confidential and no disclosure will be made without your permission, except to the Admissions Committee and appropriate law school personnel, as required by law, or as required by appropriate bar authorities in connection with your application for admission to the bar.

If you answer "Yes" to any of the following questions, please attach a detailed explanation that includes the date, place, circumstances, disposition and punishment, if any, in an attached statement.
