Map and Compass for Family Forest Owners

Foresters have traditionally verified locations and distances using a map and compass. It is now possible to accomplish these tasks using a Global Positioning System (GPS) receiver, but it is often still essential to know how to use a map and compass. Magnetic compasses do not rely on batteries or electronic signals and are usually less expensive than GPS equipment and software. Both approaches require a solid ability to read and interpret maps.

This program features 2-3 hours indoors interpreting various natural resource maps, followed by field activities using magnetic compasses. The program will be taught by Kurt Koetter, an Idaho Master Forest Steward who has many years of experience in using map and compass for forestry applications.
