MOSCOW GRADUATE LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The Moscow, Idaho based Master of Landscape Architecture (MLA) accredited program utilizes Idaho's many communities to plan and design solutions for a range of issues: landscape and community resiliency, food security, place - based environmental education, open space planning and design and the sustainable stewardship of soil and water systems. Students have the opportunity to work collaboratively with a number of college programs including Architecture, Art and Design, Bioregional Planning and Community Design and Virtual Technology and Design. Students may also participate in faculty-funded scholarship in landscape and community resiliency, geo-design and bioremediation.

MASTER OF LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE - Boise Urban Design Center

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The University of Idaho's Boise-based Urban Design Center hosts the professional, accredited Master of Landscape Architecture (MLA) as an integrated urban design program with Master of Architecture students. Through research, internships and community engagement, students work across a range of scales that encompass interdependencies between culture, ecology, aesthetics and economics through the lens of sustainability and resiliency. The integrated program promotes creativity and design thinking that blend real-world experience to create seamless transitions from the academic to professional realm. Students benefit from regular interaction with professionals from local firms as well as "partner" firms based in major cities such as San Francisco and Seattle.
