Educational Leadership

Degree programs include:

- Master's degree curriculum with principal certification
- Education specialist degree curriculum with superintendent certification
- Ed.D. and Ph.D. programs
- Master's and specialist programs with an emphasis on Higher Education Administration

The Educational Leadership program prepares highly qualified educational administrators at the masters, specialist, and doctoral degree levels with certification or competency emphasis for K-12 principals, superintendents and higher education administration. By preparing leaders to meet the State Board of Education standards-based competencies and professional standards, our graduates strengthen Idaho's civic, economic, environmental and social foundations and contribute to the state's school systems and communities.

About the Program

- Course work leading to principal certification may be taken to complete the specialist degree if a master's degree is already held. Nondegree endorsement-only plans may be written by advisers as well, to meet state certification requirements.
- A specialist degree also may be earned by completion of the principal

- certification or non-certification course work.
- Degree study plans may be revised to accommodate specific needs. There are no cohort group restrictions start, continue and complete your degree at your own pace.
- Courses are offered live, through video-conferencing, online or Webassisted. It is possible to take most classes online with adviser approval.
- Also available: Ed.D. and Ph.D. programs; master's and specialist programs with an emphasis on Higher Education Administration. Please contact the faculty for additional information.
