Admissions

Admission into our seamless architecture program – which leads to the B.S. Arch and the accredited professional M. Arch degree required for licensure – is very competitive.

Year One: Complete University requirements
During your first year in the program, you will work to satisfy the University of Idaho's core educational requirements and complete preparatory courses for intensive architecture study.

Transfer students: Courses you have already taken may qualify you for advanced placement.

Year Two: Apply to the Pre-Professional Architecture Program
Upon completion of your first-year requirements, you will apply to the pre-professional B.S. Arch program. You will be evaluated on your transcripts and grade point average (minimum 2.5 GPA required). Approximately 60 of the most qualified students (including transfer students) are selected for admission to the pre-professional program.

Year Three: Apply to the Professional Architecture Program
After completing second-year requirements, you are eligible to apply to the professional architecture program. Your application must include a portfolio of your design work, transcript and GPA (minimum 2.5 GPA required).

The University of Idaho is transforming itself academically and systemically to become a leader in environmental, economic and social sustainability. In March 2005, former University of Idaho President White signed the Talloires Declaration, a contract among University leaders worldwide to initiate institutional change toward sustainability.

WHAT WE'RE DOING

Working toward a greener campus...

In March 2007, former President White confirmed his pledge by making the University of Idaho a signatory to the American College and University Presidents' Climate Commitment and the Chicago Climate Exchange's mandates for reduction toward carbon neutrality. This Web site provides an umbrella for sustainability activities that different groups are undertaking to bring about that institutional change.
