LEARNING INTO SUCCESS ON OUR TERMS: REVISITING ROLES, VALUES AND SUPPORT

Presenters: Caitlin Bletscher & Holli Henning Yaeger
Silver Room

This interactive and reflective session will explore the various roles that women play in professional and personal life, and definitions of success that can unconsciously drive behavior and lead to feelings of over-commitment and scarcity. Through reflective and interactive exercises, participants will revisit their assumptions related to individual roles and identify the values that contribute to success on their terms.

SESSION II | 1:30 - 2:30 p.m.

THE MAGIC OF PEER MENTORSHIP

Presenters: Christina Vazquez & Bekah MillerMacPhee
Gold Room

Intersectional feminism is a term used widely in our current wave of feminism, but what does it really mean? Join us for an interactive workshop where we will describe how we practice intersectional feminism professionally, personally, and how we lean on each other do so.

RELATIONSHIPS MATTER: LEADERSHIP LESSONS BUILT UPON FEMINIST VALUES

Presenter: Vicki Stieha
Idaho Room

Conflicting advice abounds when it comes to assuming a leadership approach. The best answer is often, “it depends.” Workshop participants can expect to interact with other participants as we examine leadership scenarios, play with question and answer approaches, and build confidence in the power developing your authentic leadership style.

Session II Continued

Interweaving Different Ways of Knowing for Holistic Healing
Presenter: Jessica Matsaw
Idaho Room
Workshop discussion of the differences between a generalist approach, diversity training, and cultural competency training when developing models of support for minority women who are survivors of abuse and violence, specifically focusing on the need to implement cultural competency training in programs working directly with Native American women.

Your Work Never Stops: Self-Care and Working Within Your Own Identity Group
Presenter: Julia Keleher
Silver Room
In this workshop, participants will learn about the importance of self-care and have a space to discuss the complications of working within their identity based group. The workshop will also provide participants with the opportunity to brainstorm and create a self-care plan.

Preserving Relationships: A Useful Guide for Women in Higher Education
Presenters: Darci Graves & LaChelle Rosenbaum
Washington Room
Pursuing higher education can put a significant strain on interpersonal relationships. This conference session will explore the ways in which women in academia can work to preserve these relationships while simultaneously pursuing post-graduate degrees, or while making the transition to an academic career.

Serving All Women: Including Women with Impairments
Presenters: Aubrey Shaw & Sharon Stoll
Idaho Room
The Americans with Disabilities Act secures equal opportunity and supposedly outlaws discrimination for persons with disabilities. However, the law doesn’t always guarantee opportunity. Ableism, like sexism, exists. This session will offer tools such as perception techniques and servant leadership application, which can help women become leaders for those with impairments.

SESSION III | 2:45 - 3:45 p.m.

Raising Our Voices: Using Storytelling to Define Our Professional Values
Presenter: Leeann Hunter
Gold Room
Participants will engage in a series of storytelling and creative writing activities that draw upon memory, sensory experiences, and emotion to articulate how they see the world and why they aspire to create change.

Who We Are, What We Do, and How We Lean in While Being Leaned On
Presenters: Melanie-Angela Neuilly, Katie Cooper and Lindsay Lightner
Silver Room
Representing the entire WSU community, the Commission on the Status of Women advises the President on matters of equity at WSU. While successful in promoting women- and employee-conscious policies at WSU, these women have had to balance the burden of invisible labor as they continue to lean in for change.

Assessment
Please complete the written evaluations at the conclusion of each workshop. A comprehensive conference evaluation will be sent to your email address next week.
