A couple hours of practice is worth ten sloppy rounds – Babe Didrikson Zaharias

Despite the weather, the driving range is finally open. As the new season begins to take shape after a long hiatus it’s time to find some form. I’d like to share with you some observations that may help the quality and results of your practice. Practice with a purpose. If you’re just going to the range to warm up that’s your purpose. Don’t get into a lot of technical gyrations - just find a nice tempo, loosen up, go to the first tee and enjoy. If you go to the range to work on technique, be specific, don’t try to ‘fix’ too much at once. Incorporate rehearsals in your practice –in other words, try to mimic what you are trying to accomplish two or three times slowly without a ball and then go ahead and hit one. You see even the best players in the world deploying this discipline at the highest levels of completion – Justin Rose’s pre-shot routine comes to mind. Finally, hit shots on the range that reflects playing conditions. For example, play different holes in your mind and change clubs frequently. Go through your pre-shot routine before each shot. This will give you accurate feedback as to the condition of your game and also avoid the pitfall of unrealistically high expectations that get dashed on the rocks outside the OB stakes.

What you might learn in six months of practice, your pro can tell you in five minutes –

From the Grounds Crew

Greetings, the course continues to slowly dry and we are now allowing carts on a day by day basis. We have marked “paths” with green flags to indicate acceptable routes and have marked wet areas with pink flags to avoid. The greens continue to recover from the harsh winter. New plant growth on greens is diminishing the impact of snow mold, however it is still quite evident. We plan to aerate the greens with the new puncher in late May and continue our vertical-cutting protocols to maximize playability. Again thanks to everyone for their patience during this cold wet spring.
