2021 Impact
Programming on range management practices to help producers continue to operate under drought conditions were offered. Producers were assisted in decision making processes related to crop and livestock losses due to the continued drought. Educator Carmen Willmore promoted and participated in the Idaho Young Cattle Producer Conference for cattle producers aged 20-40. She also led coordination of the Idaho SARE program continuing the promotion of agricultural sustainability throughout Idaho and produced many educational materials for the University of Idaho Sheep and Goat webinar series.

4-H in Lincoln County
The UI Extension, Lincoln County 4-H program was involved in 4-H camp and hosted Sheep and Goat Education Day and cooking classes for 4-H members.

On the Horizon
UI Extension, Lincoln County will grow the reach of 4-H youth development through new and growing programs and host more educational opportunities for youth. Willmore will continue education for drought management practices and sustainable agriculture.
