Healthy Halloween Hints

For health-conscious parents, Halloween can be tricky. Do you set limits, or do you let kids decide how much to eat? There isn’t one right answer. Remember, there are no “bad” foods. A little extra candy and cookies on Halloween isn’t “bad.” Here are some hints for handling Halloween:

- Before kids go trick-or-treating serve a healthy meal, so they’re not hungry when the candy starts coming in.

- Get your family active. On Halloween walk around the neighborhood instead of driving. During the day walk around a local park and enjoy the changing colors of the trees. No child can resist a nice pile of leaves.

- Know how much candy your child has collected and store it somewhere other than the child’s room. Having it so handy can be an irresistible temptation for many kids.

- Consider being somewhat lenient about candy eating on Halloween, within reason, and save the leftover treats to eat over the coming days and/or months. Candy and snacks shouldn’t get in the way of kids eating healthy meals.

- Encourage your child to be mindful of the amount of candy and snacks eaten — and to stop before feeling full or sick.

- Be a role model by eating Halloween candy in moderation yourself. Buy candy at the last minute and get rid of the leftover candy you may not want around. You also can offer some alternatives to candy to trick-or-treaters who come to your door. However, be careful with very young children and small hard snacks or toys that could pose choking hazards.

- Don’t just focus on treats during the Halloween season. Carving a pumpkin is a fun activity for children. You can make something healthy with the pumpkin.

And remember that Halloween, like other holidays, is a single day on the calendar. If your family eats sensibly during the rest of the year, it will have a more lasting impact than a few days of overindulgence.

Pumpkin Peanut Butter Dip

- ¾ cup pumpkin
- ¾ cup peanut butter
- 1 to 4 tsp. brown sugar to taste
- ½ tsp. vanilla

Mix all ingredients together. Serve with apple wedges, celery and/or carrot sticks.
