COLLEGE OF LAW STUDENT HANDBOOK

2022–2023

It is the responsibility of all students to read and understand its contents. Questions about the Handbook should be directed to the Deans of Students or Professors of Academic Success.

Catalogs, bulletins, and course or fee schedules are not considered binding contracts between the University of Idaho and students. The University of Idaho reserves the right at any time, without advance notice, to:

1. Withdraw or cancel classes, courses, and programs,
2. Change fee schedules,
3. Change the academic calendar,
4. Change admission and registration requirements,
5. Change the regulations and requirements governing instruction in, and graduation from, the University of Idaho and its various divisions, and
6. Change any other regulations affecting students.

Changes go into effect whenever the proper authorities so determine and apply not only to prospective students but also to those who are matriculated in the University. When economic and other conditions permit, the University of Idaho tries to provide advance notice of such changes. In particular, when an instructional program is to be withdrawn, the University will make every reasonable effort to ensure that students who are within two years of completing graduation requirements, and who are making normal progress toward completion of those requirements, will have the opportunity to complete the program that is to be withdrawn.

I. Essential Information

A. Honor Code

All students at the University of Idaho College of Law must sign and abide by the College of Law Honor Code, which governs their academic and professional conduct.

Under the Honor Code, students have the duty (1) to refrain from misconduct themselves and (2) to report violations by other students. Violations include, but are not limited to, plagiarism, improper conduct on exams, breaching anonymity, and impeding administration of the Honor Code.

Each student is responsible for understanding and observing the provisions of the Honor Code. If you have any doubt whether an action you are contemplating violates the Honor Code, it is your responsibility to seek guidance from a faculty member or the College’s Deans of Students. Observing the Honor Code in law school will help you develop and adhere to the high standards of integrity, responsibility, and discipline essential to the ethical practice of law.

Suspected Honor Code violations are referred to College of Law Counsel (composed of faculty and law students) and, if probable cause is found, to the Honor Court (also composed of faculty and law students). If the Honor Court finds a violation, it may impose a wide range of sanctions including public service, reprimands, disciplinary suspension, and expulsion.

Students who engage in conduct that violates the Honor Code may face additional sanctions outside the Honor Code system. A student who violates class rules may receive a failing grade in the affected course because the Honor Code does not affect a faculty member’s authority over class conduct or grading. Additionally, conduct that violates the Honor Code may violate the University of Idaho Student Code of Conduct or federal, state, or local law, bringing potential additional sanctions ranging from expulsion from the University to legal action.

B. One Law School, Two Locations

The University of Idaho College of Law fulfills its statewide mission in two locations. Students can fulfill all three years of their legal education in either Moscow or Boise. In Moscow, the College of Law is located at the Menard Law Building on the main campus of the University of Idaho. In Boise, the College is located at the Front Street Building in Downtown Boise. The two locations afford students a broad range of opportunities to meet their individual and professional interests. This Handbook covers information applicable to both locations.

C. Mission of the College of Law

The mission of the University of Idaho College of Law is to:

- Provide access across all cultures and ideologies to the highest quality of legal education;
- Lead the region in promoting civil discourse on concerns of policy and law and in providing legal service to underserved populations; and
- Contribute to local, regional, national, and international scholarly dialogue on issues of critical importance in our time.
D. Professional Relationships

The College of Law holds its students, faculty, and staff to high professional standards, which include the obligation to treat all persons with dignity and respect. Those in the legal profession have a professional obligation not only to treat others with civility, but also to develop cultural competencies and guard against cognitive and other biases. Discrimination and harassment in all their forms not only violate students’ professional obligations as future lawyers but also College and University policies, and they may violate state and federal law as well. Following are several statements of policy that apply in this area.

1. College of Law Diversity Statement

At University of Idaho College of Law we embrace diversity within our College community and the legal profession by protecting and fostering an inclusive and respectful learning environment for the discussion of legal principles, concepts, and practical skills. As a preparatory ground for future practitioners of the law, we adhere to high standards of legal professionalism within our classrooms, our offices, our hallways, our student organizations, our gathering places, and our activities. The calling to law is an important one with significant impacts on society, and as a College we take that significance to the core of our purpose. By all members of the College being able and willing to listen respectfully to each other’s viewpoints and to participate in discussions in a calm, professional, and civil manner, we strive to abolish educational inequity stemming from disparate treatment. We welcome and value law students, staff, and faculty from all cultures, races, ethnicities, genders, physical abilities, lifestyles, opinions, nationalities, philosophies, sexual orientations, religious backgrounds, ages, life experiences, and identities. Diversity is an essential component of the College and requires legal professionalism from all sectors of our community to provide an appropriately respectful learning environment.

2. College of Law Diversity & Inclusion Resolution

WHEREAS, the College of Law is committed to nondiscrimination consistent with the University of Idaho’s official policy of nondiscrimination, including, but not limited to nondiscrimination on the basis of race, color, religion (creed), national origin (ancestry), ethnicity, sex, age, sexual orientation, gender identity/expression, pregnancy, disability, marital or family status, genetic information, or veteran or military status, and

WHEREAS, the Mission of the University of Idaho College of Law is to provide access across all cultures and ideologies to the highest quality of legal education, to lead the region in promoting civil discourse on concerns of policy and law, to provide legal service to underserved populations, and to contribute to the local, regional, national, and international scholarly dialogue on issues of critical importance in our time, and

WHEREAS, to fulfill that mission, we must have uncomfortable and transparent conversations about racial injustice and take constructive actions to make meaningful progress toward societal change, and

WHEREAS, we all have an obligation and must commit to doing better at embracing our differences and the power that diversity represents and at standing with all those who experience racial prejudice as effective allies;

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED THAT the College of Law commits to:

• Condemn and seek to end racism and all other forms of discrimination against those referenced above;
• Teach our students to engage in critical and constructive dialogue surrounding issues of racism and discrimination;
• Actively encourage and advocate for policies to support the students, staff, faculty and others affected by racism, discrimination, oppression, injustices, and inequities inherent in our institutional systems;
• Continuously strive to accord respect and equitable treatment to all;
• Ensure our students, staff, and faculty feel secure and institutionally supported in the environment we have the responsibility to create.

3. University of Idaho Policy of Nondiscrimination (Excerpt)
The University of Idaho has a policy of nondiscrimination on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, sexual orientation, gender identity/expression, age, disability, or status as a Vietnam era veteran. This policy applies to all programs, services, and facilities, and includes, but is not limited to, applications, admissions, access to programs and services, and employment. Such discrimination is prohibited by Titles VI and VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, Sections 503 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Vietnam Era Veteran’s Readjustment Assistance Act of 1974, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act Amendments of 1978, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, the Civil Rights Act of 1991, other state and federal laws and regulations and university commitments.

4. University of Idaho Sexual Harassment Policy (Excerpt)
A-1. The university must maintain a learning and work environment for students and employees that is fair, humane, and responsible. Sexual discrimination, including sexual harassment, interferes with the educational process and with the productivity of the faculty and staff; thus, it is inimical to the university.

A-2. Like discrimination on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, age, disability, or status as a Vietnam-era veteran, sexual harassment violates federal and state laws and the policies of the Board of Regents of the University of Idaho. It is, therefore, the policy of the University of Idaho to condemn sexual harassment.

5. University of Idaho Consensual Relationships Policy (Excerpt)
A. In order to foster healthy professional relationships at all levels of the institution, it is the policy of the University of Idaho that no employee shall enter into or continue a romantic or sexual relationship with a student or employee over whom she or he exercises academic, administrative, supervisory, evaluative, counseling or other authority.

E. Sources of Rules Governing Students
Students at the College of Law are subject to all rules and regulations of the College and the University of Idaho. In addition to the rules set forth in this Handbook, other rules governing students can be found in the College of Law Honor Code, College of Law Bylaws, College of Law Academic Standards, University of Idaho Student Code of Conduct, University of Idaho Statement of Student Rights, and University of Idaho General Catalog. Although they do not directly govern students, the ABA Standards for Approval of Law Schools also inform, guide, and dictate the College’s rules and policies.

Within the general policies of the Idaho State Board of Regents and the University of Idaho, the College of Law Dean and faculty are responsible for formulating and administering the program of the College. The authority to adopt, amend, or waive College rules resides with the faculty. Except as otherwise specified, the Dean or their designee has authority to interpret and apply College rules. Appeals from decisions of the Dean are to a quorum of the faculty of the College.
F. Communications from the College and University

Every law student is assigned a University of Idaho VandalMail account (___@vandals.uidaho.edu). Official e-mails from the College and University are sent only to the VandalMail address. Some materials, such as University bills for new students, are sent by U.S. mail to students’ permanent addresses. Each student also has access to the University’s VandalWeb and the Idaho Law Careers online system.

Students are bound by and responsible for all College and University notices, announcements, and other information presented in mandatory meetings, sent to their VandalMail accounts, posted on VandalWeb or the Idaho Law Careers home page, or sent by U.S. mail to their permanent address. This includes, but is not limited to, notices from our College’s administration, Assistant Registrar-Law, faculty, and staff. Students should check their VandalMail at least daily, and Idaho Law Careers and VandalWeb at least weekly.

G. Mandatory Meetings and Requirements

The College requires students to fulfill certain requirements beyond graduation requirements. These may include, but are not limited to, providing original transcripts for all educational institutions attended, completing and turning in certain forms, and attending mandatory meetings. The College may impose penalties upon students for failing to fulfill mandatory requirements. Penalties include, but are not limited to, the following:

- The College will withdraw all students from fall courses who fail to meet the October 15 deadline for providing original transcripts from all prior educational institutions they attended.
- Students who have unexcused absences from mandatory meetings may have registration holds placed on their accounts until they make up the missing meetings. The College bears no obligation to ensure that a student with an unexcused absence from a mandatory meeting knows important information, dates, or deadlines presented at such a meeting. In addition, documentation on non-compliance may be put into student files and disclosed to bar authorities.
- Students who fail to attend required meetings with College faculty or staff may be required to meet with the Deans of Students or their designee.

H. Personal Information and Privacy

1. Duty to Update Application

The obligation to completely and accurately answer all questions on the application for admissions does not end with the offer of admission. Entering students should review their applications before or during Orientation, paying particular attention to the following character and fitness questions.

1. Have you ever been arrested, served a summons, cited, questioned, indicted, taken into custody, charged, or tried or investigated for a felony, misdemeanor, infraction (including traffic tickets), or probation violation? (Include all incidents as a juvenile or adult, no matter how minor the charge, guilty or not, exonerated or not, whether or not sentencing was withheld, excluding only non-moving traffic violations that resulted in a penalty less than $25.00. You must include criminal and/or juvenile matters that have been expunged.)

2. Have you ever, in any capacity, been a party to, named, or described in any civil proceeding, action, or suit, including divorce, any court case, bankruptcy, or administrative proceeding?

3. Have you ever been the subject of any complaint, grievance, or proceedings that either sought or resulted in your admonition, reprimand, censure, suspension, discipline, citation, contempt, or fine as a member or any profession or occupation, or as the holder of any license?

4. Have you ever been terminated from employment or requested to resign by an employer?
5. Have you ever been discharged or dismissed from the armed forces other than by honorable discharge, or sentenced in a court-martial proceeding?

6. Have you ever been charged, formally or informally, with misrepresentation, fraud, misapplication, perjury/false swearing, or misappropriation of property, either individually or in a representative capacity (e.g., as an officer of a business entity, partner or other fiduciary relationship)?

7. Have you ever been investigated, suspended, expelled or disciplined, formally or informally, by any school, college or university above the high school level? This includes academic or social probation.

8. Have you ever been denied any license or certificate requiring proof of good moral character?

9. Have you at any time in the past ten years, either individually or in association with others, been in default on or past due for more than sixty days on any indebtedness, including those barred by a Statute of Limitations?

10. Are you, either individually or in association with others, in default in any way in the performance or discharge of any duty or obligation imposed on you by decree of any court, including, but not limited to alimony, maintenance or child support?

11. Have you ever been a party to a restraining order or order of protection (e.g., for stalking, domestic violence, threats, intimidation, etc.)? In answering this question, include all incidents — even juvenile and expunged matters.

12. Have you ever been placed on academic probation, suspended, expelled, disciplined, dismissed, or required to withdraw from any college or university for academic reasons?

13. Are there criminal charges pending against you, or are you presently under investigation?

14. Are there any facts not disclosed by your answers concerning your background, history, experience or activities which may cause one to question your character, fitness or ability to practice law?

If the answer to any question has changed, students must, before the first day of classes, submit amendments with current information directly to the College’s Deans of Students. Supplying inaccurate or incomplete information on the application for admission is considered deliberate misrepresentation and fraud. Submit your amendment using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

Supplying inaccurate or incomplete information on the application includes, but is not limited to, submitting inaccurate transcripts or supporting documents, failing to list all institutions attended, and failing to list criminal convictions or disciplinary actions, however minor. The Deans of Students will review all cases and, where the admissions decision may have been different had the information been disclosed, may refer the matter to the Admissions Committee. The Deans of Students and the Admissions Committee may impose a range of sanctions, up to and including revoking the offer of admission. Students may appeal such sanctions to the College of Law faculty by filing a letter of appeal with the Deans of Students within 14 days of receiving written notice of sanctions.

Entering students execute an Authorization to Release Records and Information. The authorization is kept as part of every student’s permanent file at the College. If the College receives information casting doubt on the completeness or accuracy of an application, this authorization allows it to verify information in the admissions application. State bar associations usually require a similar or broader authorization to investigate the fitness of bar applicants.
2. Ongoing Duty to Update Character and Fitness Information
Students must inform the Deans of Students about all matters, even those occurring outside the College, that may reflect upon their academic standing or character and fitness. Any matters that occur between matriculation and graduation must be reported. Such matters include, but are not limited to, information about:

- Criminal matters, including restraining orders and matters that have been expunged, or where the student was questioned or arrested, even if no charges were brought.
- Non-academic or academic discipline imposed by other educational institutions.
- Financial matters such as bankruptcy, default, failure to pay child support, or failure to file required tax returns.
- Discipline by other bodies including the military and professional organizations.

Submit your update using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

3. Ongoing Duty to Update Personal Information
Entering students must fill out an online College of Law Personal Information Sheet. Thereafter, when applicable, students must regularly update their addresses (local and permanent), phone numbers, e-mail addresses, marital status, name, and social security number on VandalWeb.

4. Privacy and Release of Student Information
The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) governs the confidentiality of student records. While most information about students is confidential, the University of Idaho can generally disclose, without a student’s consent, “directory information” including name, address, telephone number, e-mail address, class, and attendance dates. Students may restrict disclosure of some or all of their directory information by filling out a Confidentiality Request, Request to Restrict the Disclosure of Directory Information, within the first 10 days of any academic term and delivering it to the Assistant Registrar–Law.

In some circumstances, students may want specific persons to have access to information that would normally be considered confidential. For example, a student might want a spouse to have access to financial aid information. Students may authorize the University to make such limited disclosures by filling out a Consent for Release of Student Information. Please deliver this form directly to the Assistant Registrar–Law.

The College occasionally takes photographs and digital images of students engaging in law school activities. Entering students fill out the College of Law Photo Consent and Release form giving or withholding permission to use their photographs in promotional materials such as the College’s website, catalog, brochures, and flyers. Students may revoke their previous choice at any time by giving written notice to the Assistant Registrar–Law.

I. Vandal Cards
The Vandal Card (student identification card) provides building and library card access to College of Law facilities in Moscow and Boise. Different cards are used in the Moscow and Boise locations: please refer to the online Vandal Card request form for more information on how to obtain a Vandal Card for your location.

J. Employment
Because of law school’s rigorous demands, fulltime 1Ls (those taking 10 or more credits a semester) are not allowed to be employed for more than 10 hours a week. Upper division students enrolled in 12 or more credits may not be employed over 20 hours a week during the academic year.

In rare circumstances, the Deans of Students may waive the maximum hours of employment rule for students who demonstrate the academic and professional ability to balance more than 20 hours of work a
A few opportunities for employment exist within the College of Law. Some faculty members hire research or teaching assistants, and the Law Library sometimes has openings for student assistants. Students interested in other employment are encouraged to contact the Career Development Office.

K. Idaho State Residency

The rules determining Idaho residency for tuition purposes are governed by state law under Idaho Statute §33-3717B and Idaho Administrative Code 08.01.04. In general, incoming law students who do not qualify for state residency during 1L year can often gain state residency for 2L and 3L years by the “Independent Student” pathway. For more information, visit the Law Admissions web page, www.uidaho.edu/law/admissions/residency, and the University Registrar’s web page on residency, www.uidaho.edu/registrar/registration/residency.

L. Student Bar Association

The Student Bar Association (“SBA”) is the law school student government. Each law student is automatically a member of the SBA. The SBA has presidents and other officers in both Moscow and Boise locations who represent the collective interests of the student body in administrative matters. The SBA Council is elected in the fall, and the presidents and other officers in the spring.

II. Services for Students

A. College of Law Services

1. Assistance with Non-Academic Problems

Law students often experience personal or family situations that have the potential to affect their academic performance. Such problems may range from anxiety to medical conditions to bereavement to substance abuse.

If you have a problem, please let a faculty or staff member at the College know. In particular, the Professors of Academic Success, Professor of Bar Success, or Deans of Students can let your instructors know you will be missing classes, arrange for sources of help, or assist you in crafting personal strategies to lessen the impact on your studies. All such communications to the Professors of Academic Success, Professor of Bar Success, and Deans of Students are considered highly private and will not be shared without your permission unless faculty and staff must report this information under statute or University rules. Reporting is mandatory for extremely serious situations such as child neglect or abuse, sexual harassment, and imminent threat of death or serious injury.

In addition, if you know of a fellow student in crisis, please share this information so the College can provide timely assistance. We will hold your communication in confidence unless you explicitly allow us to share or we are required to disclose by law.

2. Deans of Students

The Deans of Students, currently Leon Samuels and Kristi Running, are the point of contact for student questions and concerns. They handle student personal and medical emergencies, deal with examination issues including rescheduling, coordinate accommodations for students with disabilities, address concerns related to classroom issues or student conduct, and review student requests for waivers.

Use the online Dean of Students Approval Form to make any request for academic or other action from the Deans of Students.
3. Academic Success and Bar Success
The Academic and Bar Success Professors in Moscow and Boise offer assistance with all aspects of academic success, academic advising, and bar preparation.

4. Admissions Office
The admissions team in conjunction with the Admissions Committee admit new, transfer, and visiting students to the College of Law. In addition, the Admissions Office assists with financial aid, scholarships, and application documents as well as recruiting, marketing and social media content.

5. Career Development Office
The Career Development Office (CDO) facilitates career planning, resume preparation, job search strategy, and assisting students to conduct their own employment searches. New students, including transfers, are required to meet with a CDO professional during their first year.

The online resource Idaho Law Careers (ILC) (formerly “Symplicity”) allows students to set up appointments with CDO professionals, view job listings, sign up for on-campus interviews, find externship opportunities, record pro bono hours, and access other features for professional development including resume and cover letter templates.

Students can access Idaho Law Careers through the Career Development website or at https://law-uidaholaw-csm.symplicity.com/students/. Registration information for Idaho Law Careers is distributed to students in the fall of 1L year or upon transferring to UI Law. Students having difficulty accessing their account should contact the Career Development Office at law-careers@uidaho.edu.

6. Assistant Registrar–Law
The Assistant Registrar–Law provides many services directly to students, including assisting with registration, reviewing requests for exam reschedules, processing grades, scheduling room use, producing class rankings, and providing letters of good standing. Services provided for graduating students, bar applicants, and alumni include performing degree audits, providing law school verification for bar applications, and verifying graduation.

7. Administration Offices
In addition to assisting deans and faculty, the Administration Offices provide services to students, including coordinating law school exams, overseeing aspects of student travel to regional competitions, producing semester booklists, and providing notary service.

8. Pro Bono Director
The Pro Bono Director administers the College’s pro bono program. For more information about the pro bono service graduation requirement, see Section IV.C.6., Perform Specified Hours of Pro Bono Service, as well as the Pro Bono web page, www.uidaho.edu/law/academics/practical-skills/pro-bono.

9. Externship Director
The College’s Externship Director coordinates both summer and semester externships. For more information about externships, see Section V.E., Externships, as well as the Externships web page, www.uidaho.edu/law/academics/practical-skills/externships.

10. Law Library
The Law Library is the heart and information hub of the College, in its two locations in the Menard Law Building in Moscow and the Front Street Building in Boise. The library in Boise also serves as the Idaho State Law Library. Please see the Law Library websites for hours, holdings, services, and policies.

Students must check out all library items they use for more than a few hours, even those items used inside the library. In particular, students must check out all items kept in carrels, placed with personal effects, carried to classes, or taken out of the law building. Vandal Cards function as library cards.
11. Technology Support
Law students in both Moscow and Boise receive technology support primarily from College of Law IT Services (LawTech). Up-to-date information can be found at LawTech’s web page, www.uidaho.edu/law/lawtech.

12. Emergency Fund
Limited funds are available to assist law students facing financial emergencies. Students may apply for College of Law short term loans to meet emergency needs. These funds are for true emergencies and not meant to take the place of prudent financial management. For more information about emergency loans, contact the Admissions Department or Deans of Students. If College loan funds are not available, students may apply for University Short Term Emergency Loans through the Financial Aid Office.

B. Accommodations and Services

1. For Students with Disabilities
Students with temporary or permanent medical conditions or with physical, cognitive, or psychological disabilities may be able to receive accommodations that eliminate barriers to their success. Accommodated students do not receive an advantage over others; rather, accommodations allow them to not be at a disadvantage to other students as a result of conditions beyond their control. In order to receive accommodations, students must disclose their disabilities to the University’s Center for Disability Access and Resources (CDAR) directly at 208-885-6307 or cdar@uidaho.edu. Although physically located on the University’s Moscow campus, CDAR provides services to College students in both Moscow and Boise.

Students who desire disability accommodations must provide CDAR with appropriate documentation and give adequate advance notice. Disability documentation must be provided by a physician, psychologist, audiologist, or other licensed professional appropriately qualified to diagnose the specific disability of the individual. Documentation must include the specific diagnosis, a description of functional limitations, and recommendations for appropriate academic adjustments or accommodations. In addition, the documentation must be on official letterhead of the licensed medical provider and include their signature and date signed. Once CDAR has received adequate documentation of a disability, it may recommend classroom and/or exam accommodations. The College will work with the student and CDAR to provide appropriate accommodations that do not conflict with the essential functions of a law student or compromise the integrity of the law study program. All accommodations must be approved by CDAR prior to implementation and cannot be retroactive. In addition, students wishing to receive classroom or exam accommodations must request accommodations every semester.

Faculty members are not informed about exam accommodations; they are informed only of accommodations that may affect the conduct of the class. College staff members are informed of disabilities only to the extent that they need this information to provide services to students. The College encourages students with disabilities to provide documentation to CDAR even if they are unsure whether they wish to receive accommodations: the choice of whether to take approved accommodations is always up to the student. The Professors of Academic Success and Bar Success, and Deans of Students are happy to talk with students who are unsure of whether they should seek accommodations.

2. For Students with Special Circumstances
Recognizing that students are whole persons, the College is committed to meeting the legitimate needs of students in a variety of special circumstances. Students with any special needs are encouraged to contact the Deans of Students, Professors of Academic Success and Bar Success, or anyone in Student Services for assistance. While each situation is different, here are some examples of circumstances where the College may provide assistance:
• Nursing mothers. Lactation rooms are available in both locations. Contact the Deans of Students or the Professors of Academic Success and Bar Success to learn about location and access to the room in the Menard Law Building or in the Front Street Building. Contact UI Boise Operations at 208-364-4001 or uiboise@uidaho.edu to learn about location and access to the room in the Idaho Water Center. The College can also provide appropriate academic accommodations such as the ability to leave classes as needed, flexibility in attendance policies, and additional time on exams for pumping or nursing.

• Religious observances. The College can help provide flexibility in attendance policies for religious observance purposes.

• Family emergencies and bereavement. The College can inform instructors of student absences due to family emergencies, bereavement, or impending death of family members. Please reach out to our Academic Success faculty or your Dean of Students for assistance. Instructors are flexible in adjusting deadlines and class attendance policies in these circumstances.

C. Counseling Services

Law students in Moscow can take advantage of free confidential counseling and crisis intervention services provided by the UI Counseling and Testing Center (“CTC”), www.uidaho.edu/current-students/ctc, located at Mary Forney Hall in Moscow; contact the CTC at 208-885-6716 or ctc@uidaho.edu.

Boise State University’s Counseling Services provides law students in Boise with confidential short- and long-term counseling and crisis intervention at their location in the Norco Building on the Southeast side of BSU’s campus, https://healthservices.boisestate.edu/.

In addition, the following services are available to all law students in any location:

- CTC’s crisis telephone counseling, 208-885-6716, press 3, after hours and on weekends
- Idaho Lawyers Assistance Program 24-hour hotline, 866-460-9014
- Idaho Suicide Prevention Hotline, 208-398-4357
- National Suicide Prevention Hotline, 800-273-8255
- National Crisis Text Line is available by texting START to 741-741

In a mental health emergency at either College location, call 911.

Sometimes students are reluctant to take advantage of counseling or substance abuse treatment for fear they will have to report this when applying for the bar. It’s important to know that mental health and substance use issues are not a barrier to bar admission: indeed, according to the ABA, 28% of attorneys suffer from depression and 19% have severe anxiety. Rather, bar admission authorities favorably view applicants who actively seek treatment for mental/emotional health issues or alcohol/substance abuse.

D. Process for Student Complaints

Students who have experienced sexual harassment or have been affected by or have any concern about any form of sexual misconduct – including stalking, domestic violence, dating violence, sexual harassment, or sexual assault – should file a report with the University’s Office of Civil Rights & Investigations at https://www.uidaho.edu/ocri/report-discrimination. The University also has a variety of Care Reports you should submit to report concerns about sexual misconduct, bias, conduct issues, or other concerns.

Students with concerns or complaints about other significant problems that directly implicate the quality of the College’s program of legal education or its compliance with the ABA’s Standards for Approval of Law Schools are encouraged to first share their concerns directly with the person or office responsible for the problem so problems can be resolved on the lowest level. When this is not feasible, desirable, or effective, students should follow the complaint procedure outlined in the Student Complaints Policy.
III. Academic Policies and Procedures

A. Registering for Courses

1. Workload per Credit Hour
   In accordance with ABA Standard 310, the College awards one credit hour for experiences that are reasonably designed to equate to at least 12.5 total hours of classroom instruction and at least 30 total hours of out-of-class student work. For a semester-long classroom course, one credit equates to at least 50 minutes of classroom instruction per week and at least two hours of out-of-class student work per week. Other courses (including externships, clinics, directed study, law journals, and intensive or summer classes) require at least the equivalent amount of academic work per credit hour – i.e., an average of a little over 3 hours per credit, over a 14-week semester. Thus, for example, a student taking Directed Study (LAW 983) for 2 credits should spend a total of at least 85 hours of work on it (an average of a little over 6 hours per week).

2. Sources of Information for Registration
   Before, during, and after registering for courses, students should pay attention to the following sources of relevant information:
   - Advising information in this Handbook:
     - Section IV Requirements for the J.D.
     - Section V Academic Planning
     - Section VI Becoming Practice Ready: Developing Lawyering Skills
     - Section VII Emphasis Areas
     - Section VIII Concurrent Degree Programs
     - Section IX Planning for Law Practice
     - Section X Planning for Bar Admission
     - Section XI Course Listings and Course Descriptions
   - Registration memo and draft schedule from the Assistant Registrar–Law, which includes the draft course and exam schedules and information on the coming semester’s courses.
   - The College’s Academic Administration web page, with information on courses, schedules, deadlines, booklists, and more.
   - E-mail communications from the College, especially those from the Deans, Professors of Academic Success and Bar Success, and Assistant Registrar–Law.
   - The University’s Class Schedule web page, which lists courses, credits, enrollment limits, and available seats.
   - The University Registrar’s Forms web page, which contains forms for actions that cannot be accomplished online through VandalWeb.
   - Other resources on the Academic Success and Academic Administration web pages.

3. Registration for 1Ls
   All 1L courses are mandatory and must be taken during the first year unless the Deans of Students authorize otherwise. Incoming 1Ls following the Adjusted Curricular Path for less than full-time study must meet with their Professor of Academic Success before or during Orientation to create an academic plan to complete all 1L courses during the first two years of law study. 1Ls may not enroll in anything other than 1L courses, including non-law courses, without the permission of the Deans of Students.

   Incoming 1Ls must register themselves online for fall courses in accordance with the instructions on the Admitted Students web page. For the second semester, 1Ls must register for all 1L spring courses in the same location and same section to which they were assigned during fall semester. Follow instructions on the VandalWeb Registration Menu and the Academic Administration web page. Note: all outstanding balances on your UI Student Account must be paid before VandalWeb will allow you to register for classes.
4. Registration for 2Ls and 3Ls

Follow instructions on the VandalWeb Registration Menu. More instructions on the registration process are available on the Academic Administration web page. Before registration opens for each semester, students will receive the semester’s course schedule and information regarding enrollment limits, special courses, and new courses. Students on the Adjusted Curricular path must meet with a Professor of Academic Success before registering for classes each semester. Make sure you register for courses in the correct Moscow or Boise location. Note: all outstanding balances on your UI Student Account must be paid before VandalWeb will allow you to register for classes.

Law students who register for 10–18 credits during fall and spring semesters, or for 5 or more credits during the summer session, are considered full-time for purposes of student fees, financial aid, and full-time “in residence” graduation requirements, and those registering for fewer credits are considered part-time.

a. Maximum and Minimum Credits

2Ls and 3Ls may register for 10–18 credits per semester. Fourteen to sixteen credits per semester is a normal load that will allow students to graduate in the standard six semesters. Students should avoid over- or under-enrolling, since decisions regarding classrooms and scheduling are based on course enrollment size.

Students wishing to enroll in fewer than 10 credits or more than 18 credits during spring and fall semesters must first receive permission from the Deans of Students. Under ABA rules, students may not take more than 18 credits at a time. Therefore, permission will not be granted for an overload unless the overload occurs due to a course, such as Trial Advocacy, that starts and finishes before the semester begins. Submit your request using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

b. Adding and Dropping Courses

Law students should normally add a course no later than the third class meeting. Courses may be added online through the sixth day of the semester, and from the seventh through tenth day by obtaining instructor permission and using the Change of Registration form. After the tenth day, students may add courses only by petition to the University.

2Ls and 3Ls may drop courses online through the tenth day of the semester. After this deadline, the student is considered to be “withdrawing” from the course and will have a grade of W reflected on the transcript. Through the tenth week of classes, students may withdraw from classes online. After the tenth week, students may withdraw from classes only by petition to the University.

Add/drop deadlines are extremely short for summer and accelerated courses. See the Academic Calendar for exact deadlines.

c. Variable Credit Courses

Several law courses are offered for variable credit. There are two basic types of variable credit courses: instructor-determined variable credit, and student-option variable credit. The type of variable credit is indicated in Section XI.B., Course Descriptions.

In instructor-determined variable credit courses, the instructor chooses the number of credits before the semester starts, and all students sign up for the same number of credits. Examples of instructor-determined variable credit courses are Law 851 Advanced Torts and Law 918 Internet Law.

In student-selected variable credit courses, individual students in a course may select the number of credits they wish to take with instructor approval. Examples of student-option variable credit courses are Law 983 Directed Study and Law 995 Community Law Clinic. Students are responsible for making sure they are registered for the correct number of credits. Course credits may be changed online through the sixth day of the semester, and from the seventh through tenth day by obtaining instructor permission and using the Change of Registration form. After the tenth day, students may change course...
When registering for student-selected variable credit courses, ensure you have selected the right number of credits. While most law students want to register for the maximum number of credits, the default setting for registration is for the fewest credits. Use the drop-down menu to select the correct number.

5. Auditing Courses
Auditing allows students to attend classes without fulfilling course requirements. Students may audit courses at the College of Law only with the permission of the instructor. Each instructor determines the conditions under which classes may be audited. For example, some instructors may expect auditing students to do all assignments and participate fully in classroom discussions, while others may expect auditing students to only listen. Because each instructor has different expectations and rules concerning auditing, students who wish to audit a course should first talk with the instructor to determine the instructor’s conditions and expectations.

To audit a course, students must first register for the course, then fill out the appropriate section of the Change of Registration form, obtain the instructor’s signature, and return the form to the Registrar within the first 10 days of the semester. From the third through the tenth week of classes, students may change from credit to audit by filling out the appropriate section of the Change of Registration form; however, a W will show on the transcript. After the tenth week, students may change from credit to audit only by petition. Audit deadlines are shortened for summer and accelerated courses. See the Academic Calendar for exact deadlines.

Audited courses do not count in semester enrollment status for financial purposes, but they do count in the total semester maximum hours. Therefore, students cannot exceed 18 credits of credit and audited courses combined.

6. Taking Non-Law Courses
Once they have obtained pre-approval from the Deans of Students, law students can take non-law courses for pleasure or, under limited circumstances, for law credit. The Registrar will normally put credits from non-law school courses on a non-degree transcript, but see Section III. B.5., Non-Law Graduate Credits, for the rules governing courses for which law or graduate credit is desired. Submit your request to take non-law courses using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

7. Enrollment (Class Size) Limits
Enrollment is limited for all College of Law courses because of fire code regulations, facilities constraints, distance education constraints, and educational considerations. To determine the enrollment limit for a course, check its “Maximum Enrollment” on the Registrar’s class schedule. Waiting lists are maintained for all oversubscribed courses.

8. Financial Aid, Scholarships, and Educational Benefits
a. Need-Based Financial Aid
Students applying for any type of need-based financial aid must have a processed FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid) on file with the University’s Student Financial Aid Services to be considered for federal aid. The University of Idaho’s FAFSA school code is 001626. Students should submit a FAFSA each school year between January 1 and February 15; later applications may be submitted but funding may be limited. Student Financial Aid Services will determine eligibility; the student can accept the financial aid award on VandalWeb. Law students receive two major types of need-based financial aid: low-interest Federal Direct Student Loans (Stafford loans) and higher-interest Graduate PLUS Loans.

Because Federal Direct Student Loans are awarded for the financial aid year (Fall-Spring-Summer) but typically disbursed in only two awards, for fall and spring semesters, students planning to earn summer credits should ask for their award to be spread out over fall, spring, and summer, or alternatively should carefully budget during the fall and spring semester so funds are available for summer courses. Although additional Graduate PLUS loans may be available for summer study, these require the borrower to be creditworthy, and a cosigner may be required for students who cannot be approved on their own credit. Contact Student Financial Aid Services for more information.

b. College of Law
All accepted students are automatically considered for College of Law merit-based scholarships; no separate application is needed. Unless the recipient is expressly notified in writing of other terms, College of Law scholarships awarded to incoming students are renewable for up to three years total attendance if the student remains in academic good standing.

c. Veterans’ Educational Benefits
The University’s Military and Veterans Assistance Office coordinates all matters dealing with educational benefits for active duty military personnel and veterans. Law students receiving veterans’ educational benefits must certify their enrollment annually with this office.

9. Billing, Fee Payment, and Refunds
Registering for courses creates a financial obligation to the University of Idaho. The University does not drop courses for non-payment. Students who decide not to attend a course for which they have registered must drop the course before classes start to avoid being billed and graded in the course.

Students who do not pay or have a payment plan by the first day of classes accrue late payment fees. The University will refund 100% of tuition and fees to students who officially withdraw before the end of the 10th day of the semester. Except in cases of medical withdrawals, no refunds are given after the 10th day. For the refund schedule for medical withdrawals, see the University Controller’s web page.

Because law school is expensive, budgeting and debt management are concerns for most law students. The College offers two resources to help students manage their financial lives. First, students have access to online and one-on-one financial education and counseling through the AccessLex MAX financial education program designed for law students. AccessLex financial educators offer group programs and one-on-one counseling for law students, in addition to offering online tools. Second, law students can avail themselves of the University’s BEAMS (Better Education About Money for Students) program, including iGrad, a financial wellness resource providing access to video tips, webinars, quick financial lessons, calculators, and more. BEAMS and iGrad can be accessed through the web page of Student Financial Aid Services. Financial concerns can extend beyond graduation. Although the law school provides law graduates with access to a commercial bar review program (currently BarBri), law graduates can still expect heavy expenses during the bar review period after graduation, including the cost of bar applications and living expenses during the 10-week bar review period. Since student financial aid is not available after graduation, students should try to save $400–$500 per semester out of their financial aid packages to finance bar application fees and expenses during the bar review period. For more information, see Section X.G., Financing the Bar Review Period after Law School.

11. Health Insurance
All law students enrolled for nine or more credits must carry health insurance. The College encourages students to compare health care policies to find the coverage most suitable for their situations. Students can buy basic coverage from the University of Idaho Student Health Insurance Program (SHIP), or they can waive SHIP if they provide proof of coverage from another provider that exceeds or meets the University’s requirements. Because SHIP does not give refunds once the policy is purchased, students shopping for health insurance should not purchase SHIP until they are sure it provides the coverage they seek. Students with family members, with greater-than-average medical needs, or at the Boise location should check whether SHIP is suitable for their needs before purchasing coverage. SHIP waivers are available on the Student Insurance web page, www.uidaho.edu/current-students/student-health-services/insurance.

B. Transferring Credits

1. Incoming Transfer Students

   Credits earned at another law school may apply towards graduation from the College where (1) the credits are earned under conditions specified in Article 2 of the College of Law Academic Standards, and (2) the Deans of Students determine the course in which the credits were earned has substantial content and does not duplicate courses the student will take at the College.

   To receive credit for courses taken at other law schools, the student must have received a grade of C+ (2.33) or higher. For all credited courses taken at other law schools, a grade of P, rather than the letter grade, will appear on the student’s University of Idaho transcript. The College will accept no more than 30 transfer credits. Credits from a school on the quarter system have to be converted to the semester system.

   Transfer students will receive a letter from the College verifying those credits accepted for transfer to the University of Idaho. However, transfer credits will not be reflected on the student’s transcript until the transfer student has completed at least one semester at the College with an overall average of 2.30 or above.

   Transfer students who have not received credit for all of the College’s required 1L courses must complete the required course(s) during the first semester each course is available unless the Deans of Students specifically waive the time requirement.

   Transfer students are responsible for meeting all graduation requirements. Transfer students must meet with an Academic Success Professor for academic advising and orientation to the College. A registration hold will be placed for the transfer student’s first semester, which will be lifted after the transfer student meets with the Academic Success Professor.

2. Incoming Visiting Students

   Visiting students from another law school must be in good standing at an ABA-accredited law school and must have earned a minimum of 25 credit hours at the home law school. Visiting students are responsible for determining which credits are transferable to their home law school and the terms, conditions, or limitations on any such credit. Visiting students are encouraged to meet early with an Academic Success Professor for academic advising and orientation to the College.

3. UI Law Students Visiting at Other Law Schools

   With approval of the Deans of Students, College of Law students in good standing may visit (i.e., take courses at or through) another ABA-accredited law school and have the earned credits transferred to the College. Normally, no more than two full semesters of credit will be approved. Additionally, a student’s last 26 semester credits must be completed in residence at the College unless the Deans of Students waive this requirement.

   Most students who transfer credits choose to take specialized summer study at another law school or ABA-accredited study abroad program. Submit your request to take courses at another law school using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.
Students desiring to visit another law school or go on a study abroad program should have a concrete understanding of that law school’s program and know the particular courses they plan to take. Normally, students should plan on taking courses that do not duplicate courses in the College of Law curriculum.

As early as possible after deciding on a program and courses, students should fill out the Transfer Credit Information Form, then meet with a Dean of Students to obtain approval of the program and courses to be taken. Allow plenty of time for the Assistant Registrar–Law to prepare a letter of good standing and other documentation requested by the host school.

While visiting, students will pay tuition and fees to the host school, but they are eligible for financial aid through the University of Idaho. To receive financial aid, fill out the Consortium Agreement and send to the institution you will be visiting. The student is responsible for ensuring that the visiting institution returns the consortium agreement to the College of Law. The Assistant Registrar–Law will process the form and forward it to Student Financial Aid Services.

Transcripts from the host school should be sent directly to the College’s Assistant Registrar–Law. Students may receive credit for courses taken at other law schools where the student receives a grade of C+ or higher. For all credited courses taken at other law schools, a grade of P, rather than the letter grade, will appear on the student’s University of Idaho transcript. Students may transfer no more than 30 credits for courses taken at other law schools.

4. Study Abroad

Law students can receive credit for study abroad programs run by any ABA-accredited law school. Law schools offer over 100 study abroad programs, mostly in summer but also including winter and spring break programs. Deadlines for most summer programs are early in spring semester. Students participating in study abroad must work with the University of Idaho International Programs Office in addition to fulfilling College of Law requirements. Submit your request to take law study abroad courses using the online Dean of Students Approval Form. Other aspects of study abroad are discussed under UI Law Students Visiting at Other Law Schools, above.

Of particular note, the College is affiliated with Gonzaga Law’s summer study abroad program in Florence, Italy. Students participating in the Florence Program have an opportunity to expand their knowledge in international and comparative law topics in a program that requires no special permission to attend.

The College grants credit for direct study in foreign law schools (i.e., not through an ABA-accredited program) on a case-by-case basis. In general, credit is given only for course work that furthers one or more of the College of Law’s learning outcomes. In addition, any student who wants to study at a foreign law school will be appointed an academic advisor who must approve in advance the student’s course of study. The student and the advisor must develop a written plan to define the educational objectives a student seeks to achieve during the period of study abroad. For more information, including information about other requirements for, and restrictions on, getting credit for study at a foreign law school, please contact the Deans of Students.

5. Non-Law Graduate Credits

After completing the first-year curriculum, students may receive up to six credits for non-law graduate-level courses or up to 12 credits for students in some concurrent degree programs. The non-law courses must (1) be related to the student’s course of law study, (2) not duplicate courses offered by the College, and (3) not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate coursework the student has completed. The student must obtain prior written permission from the Deans of Students and (if applicable) the Emphasis or Concurrent Degree advisor.
Credit for such approved graduate-level courses will be granted only if the student receives a grade of $B$ or higher, and the courses will be recorded on the law transcript with a grade of $P$. Exceptions to this may be made for UI graduate-level courses used in concurrent J.D./graduate programs.

Students taking non-law graduate-level courses at the University of Idaho for law credit only must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form (before the start of the semester):
   a. Indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
   b. Affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed; and
   c. Include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take.

2) If the Deans of Students approve the course and credits to be applied to the J.D., the Assistant Registrar-Law will follow-up with the student with additional paperwork and instructions, all of which should be submitted not later than the 10th day of the semester.

Students taking non-law graduate-level courses at an institution other than the University of Idaho for law credit only must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form (before the start of the semester):
   a. Indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
   b. Affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed;
   c. Include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take;
   d. Request a Consortium Agreement from the Assistant Registrar-Law. NOTE: A Consortium Agreement must be submitted even if the student is not receiving financial aid.

2) If the Deans of Students approve the course and credits to be applied to the J.D., the Assistant Registrar-Law will follow-up with the student with additional paperwork and instructions. The student must complete and submit all paperwork (including the Consortium Agreement) no later than the 10th day of the semester in which the student is taking the course(s).

3) Complete and submit all paperwork (including the Consortium Agreement) no later than the 10th day of the semester in which the student is taking the course(s). When the course is complete and final grades have been submitted, arrange to have an official transcript mailed to:

   Sande Schlueter
   Assistant Registrar-Law
   875 Perimeter Drive, MS 2321
   Moscow, ID 83844-2321

Students pursuing a concurrent degree at the University of Idaho must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form indicating the concurrent degree the student wishes to pursue:
   a. Not later than May 1 of their 1L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Fall of their 2L year, or
   b. Not later than October 1 of their 2L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Spring of their 2L year.
c. Students may not begin a concurrent degree later than Spring of their 2L year.

2) In every semester in which the student takes a graduate-level course that can be applied to the J.D. and/or in which the student takes a law course which can be applied to the graduate degree, fill out the Credit Reservation Request form and submit to the Assistant Registrar-Law not later than the 10th day of the semester.

3) If seeking to apply to the J.D. credits earned in a course not listed in the pre-approved graduate courses for the concurrent degree, submit the Dean of Students Approval Form (before the start of the semester):
   a. Indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
   b. Affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed; and
   c. Include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take.

Students pursuing a concurrent degree at an institution other than the University of Idaho must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form indicating the concurrent degree the student wishes to pursue:
   a. No later than May 1 of their 1L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Fall of their 2L year, or
   b. No later than October 1 of their 2L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Spring of their 2L year.
   c. Students may not begin a concurrent degree later than Spring of their 2L year.

2) The Assistant Registrar-Law will follow-up with additional paperwork and instructions. Complete and submit that paperwork (including the initial Consortium Agreement and the Transfer Credit Information form) no later than the 10th day of the first semester in which the concurrent degree is sought. Note: A Consortium Agreement must be submitted even if the student is not receiving financial aid.

3) For every semester in which the student takes graduate-level courses which will be applied to the J.D., fill out and submit a Consortium Agreement, no later than the 10th day of the semester.

4) If seeking to apply to the J.D. credits earned in a course not listed in the pre-approved graduate courses for the concurrent degree, submit the Dean of Students Approval Form (before the start of the semester):
   a. Indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
   b. Affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed; and
   c. Include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take.

5) For every semester in which the student takes graduate-level courses which will be applied to the J.D.: when the course is complete and final grades have been submitted, arrange to have an official transcript mailed to:

C. Attendance Requirements

1. Regular Class Attendance
Students are required to attend classes regularly and punctually, pursuant to American Bar Association accreditation requirements. In addition to regularly-scheduled classes, students are required to attend make-up classes scheduled during designated make-up times on the semester schedule. Each faculty member may adopt an individualized policy to assure compliance with this requirement and will announce the policy near the beginning of the semester. Faculty may impose penalties for poor attendance, including, but not limited to, lowering grades and excluding students from the final exam, effectively ensuring an F in the course.

2. Notifying Faculty of Absences
Faculty understand that a number of factors may lead a student to miss class, including illness, family emergencies, and other exigencies, and they will inform their students about their policies covering such absences. Use your professional judgment: while you need not contact faculty for every missed class, it is a mark of professionalism to inform professors if you anticipate missing two or more consecutive classes.

3. Recording Class Sessions
The majority of classes are recorded. Students may not download, save, or share any of the class recordings. Students may watch the class recordings, but any other use is a violation of the Honor Code.

Students may not electronically record classes unless they have the express consent of the instructor, except where the Deans of Students have allowed recording as an accommodation pursuant to a recommendation by the Center for Disability Access and Resources (“CDAR”). Except where a disability accommodation has been approved, recording classes without the instructor’s express consent violates the Honor Code. Students recording classes as a disability accommodation must follow procedures set forth by CDAR.

D. Withdrawals and Leaves of Absence

1. Withdrawals from Individual Courses
In exceptional circumstances, students may withdraw from one or more required courses with the permission of the Deans of Students. Students who withdraw from any required course must retake the course the next time it is offered. Submit your request to withdraw from a required course using the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

As explained under Registering for Courses, 2Ls and 3Ls may withdraw from elective courses through the tenth week of fall and spring semesters by dropping the courses on VandalWeb. During summer session, withdrawal deadlines are extremely compressed, typically only a few days. After the withdrawal deadline, students may withdraw from courses only by petition to the University’s Academic Petitions Committee (see Section III.H.2, Academic Petitions Regarding University Regulations).

2. Leaves of Absence
The College works to accommodate students who wish to take one or more semesters away from law school for medical, family, personal, or other reasons. Submit your request to take a leave of absence using the online Dean of Students Approval Form. The Deans of Students may limit the number of semesters a student takes off or set conditions on absences lasting over one semester.
3. Medical Withdrawals or Leaves of Absence

Students may take a medical withdrawal or leave of absence for pressing medical reasons at any time up until the last class day of a semester. Medically withdrawing students must receive permission from the University Dean of Students Office in addition to documentation from Student Health Services, the Counseling and Testing Center, or another licensed care provider. Follow the medical withdrawal procedure set out on the University Dean of Students web page.

Taking a medical leave of absence withdraws a student from all courses in the semester, including those for which all course requirements have been met. Students who were taking required courses at the time of the medical withdrawal must re-take these required courses at the next available opportunity. Students with lesser medical problems that do not necessitate withdrawing from all courses may have other options and should contact the Deans of Students or their Professor of Academic Success to discuss their situation.

Students who withdraw or take a leave of absence from a semester in their 1L year must return and complete the 1L year before taking 2L courses. Thus, if a student withdraws in the spring semester of their 1L year, they must wait until the following spring to return.

4. Non-Medical Withdrawals from All Courses

Students wishing to withdraw from all courses for non-medical reasons should start the process by meeting with the Deans of Students or their Professor of Academic Success. They can then withdraw from all courses by dropping the courses on VandalWeb within the first ten weeks of fall and spring semester (summer deadlines are extremely compressed, typically only a few days). After the deadline, students may withdraw from courses for compelling reasons only by petition to the University’s Academic Petitions Committee (see Section III.H.2., Academic Petitions Regarding University Regulations).

E. Exam Procedures

1. Sources of Information for Exams

Students are responsible for knowing, and are bound by, all College notices concerning exams and exam procedures. These include, but are not limited to,

- Messages from Deans, the Administration Office, and the Assistant Registrar–Law;
- Messages from LawTech;
- The College exam schedule;
- Information given in mandatory meetings;
- This College of Law Student Handbook.

Practice problems and practice exams are available from a variety of sources. The Law Library’s Course Reserves, contain many online former exams for UI Law courses; some course reserves also include representative good answers. Most professors provide practice problems and midterm exams in their courses. In addition, study aids often contain simple exam problems: these can be accessed through the Law Library or the Academic Success offices.

2. Exam Numbers

The Administration Office assigns confidential quiz and exam numbers to students each semester. Exam numbers should be kept confidential at all times. Students must place their exam numbers on the exam itself and on all answer sheets. Students who have lost or forgotten their exam numbers should contact the Administration Office as soon as possible.

3. Exam Accommodations

Students with temporary or permanent medical conditions or with physical, cognitive, or psychological disabilities may be able to receive exam accommodations. All accommodations are arranged through the University’s Center for Disability Access and Resources. Requests for exam accommodations must be made at the start of every semester the student wishes to receive the accommodations. See Section II.B.1., Accommodations and Services for Students with Disabilities, for procedures to receive exam and other accommodations.

4. Rescheduling Exams
Under appropriate conditions, students may reschedule exams in case of hardship or emergency. There are two types of requests for rescheduling exams: (1) non-emergency hardship requests, and (2) emergency requests.

Non-emergency hardship rescheduling requests are made when the student knows the hardship in advance. Non-emergency rescheduling requests must be submitted by the deadline publicized by the Assistant Registrar–Law (about one month in advance of the exam), by submitting the online Request to Reschedule Exam Form (found on the Academic Administration web page) according to the instructions on the form. Hardship does not include the desire for an earlier end to exams, less expensive travel, attendance at family/friend events such as reunions, vacations, or weddings, or similar personal concerns. Rather, hardship must be of a compelling nature. Two exams on the same day or four exams on four consecutive days are the only circumstances in which exam reschedules will be granted automatically. In all other cases, requests for hardship rescheduling will be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. Reschedules in other situations involving closely clustered exams, such as having three exams on consecutive days or four exams in one week, are granted only rarely, and such requests should detail the exigent circumstances that lead to the hardship. Because of the unpredictability of birth, the College will not routinely grant non-emergency exam reschedules for pregnancy except in cases of scheduled surgical birth.

Emergency rescheduling requests are made in the event of an emergency such as illness, accident, imminent childbirth, complications of pregnancy or conditions following childbirth, death in the family, unavoidable family emergencies, and similar situations where a reasonable student (1) would be unable to perform adequately during the exam and (2) would not be able to predict in advance either the emergency itself or the timing of the emergency.

Students facing emergency situations during the exam period should immediately contact the Administration Office at law-exams@uidaho.edu or by the most practical means. As noted under Exam Day Procedures, once a student has begun an exam they must complete it, so students facing emergencies on the day of an exam should not start the exam but should instead contact the Administration Office before the exam begins. At an appropriate time, the College may require students to provide documentation, such as a doctor’s note, to verify that the emergency situation occurred.

5. Exam Day Procedures
The Administration Office and instructors will inform students of exam day procedures. Students are responsible for knowing and abiding by these procedures.

Once a student has begun an exam, they must complete it. Therefore, students facing emergencies (e.g., imminent birth, sudden illness, death in family) should not start the exam but instead contact the Administration Office before the exam begins. See Rescheduling Exams, above.

Exam takers may use laptop computers with Examplify software or handwrite their exams. The College provides scratch paper for every student and lined paper for hand writers. Laptop users must be prepared to handwrite their exams in case of hardware or software failure. Laptops used for exams must meet the exam software minimum system requirements, which can be found on the LawTech web page. Each exam may be given in multiple rooms to accommodate hand writers and laptop users.
Students are bound by the Honor Code at all times. Exam takers may temporarily leave the exam room during the exam period, but they must follow all provisions of the Honor Code both inside and outside the exam room.

It is each student’s responsibility to hand in exams on time. Any late exams will be noted as such on the exam, and the professor may adjust scores accordingly. It is unethical and a breach of the Honor Code to keep writing, even for a moment, after the end of the exam. As a service to students, proctors will normally announce the time both five minutes before the end of the exam and the end of the exam itself. However, it is the student’s responsibility to stop writing at the correct time, regardless of any announcement or lack thereof.

Once time has been called, students must immediately turn in their exams and other testing materials in accordance with announced instructions. Students who finish early may leave the exam room quietly and turn in their exam materials. Students using Examplify must upload their exams as soon as possible after the exam, and in any case before leaving the law building or exam location. Failing to upload exams promptly may be an Honor Code violation.

Students may not discuss the exam with any person until all exams have been turned in. Students may not discuss an exam with the professor until after grades are posted.

F. Grades, Class Standing, and Transcripts

1. Grading System and Standards

Grade point averages are computed by assigning the following numerical point values per semester hour:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Grade</th>
<th>Point Value</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A</td>
<td>4.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A-</td>
<td>3.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B+</td>
<td>3.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B</td>
<td>3.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B-</td>
<td>2.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C+</td>
<td>2.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C</td>
<td>2.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C-</td>
<td>1.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D+</td>
<td>1.33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D</td>
<td>1.00</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>D-</td>
<td>0.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>F</td>
<td>0.00 (or “fail”)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

In addition, marks of P, NP, W, WU, or I are sometimes issued.

P indicates a grade of pass in pass/fail or pass/no pass College courses. NP indicates no credit in a pass/no pass course. Grades of P and NP in College courses can only be issued where the faculty has designated the courses to be graded on a pass/fail or pass/no pass basis. A grade of P is also given for all approved coursework at other law schools in which the student received a grade of C+ or better, and also for approved graduate courses taken at other colleges, including courses taken in concurrent degree programs, in which the student received a grade of B or better. Grades of P are not calculated in determining a student’s cumulative GPA or class rank.

W indicates withdrawal and is given when the student withdraws from the course after the drop deadline set by the University. WU indicates withdrawal from the University with official approval.

I indicates incomplete work of passing quality. It is assigned only rarely, on agreement between the student and instructor, when extenuating circumstances make it impossible for the student to complete course requirements on time. Under University rules, extenuating circumstances consist of situations like serious illness or the death of a family member. Procrastination and the desire to raise a grade are specifically not allowed as extenuating circumstances. Unless the instructor specifies an earlier deadline, Incompletes from fall semester must be completed by the last day of summer classes; Incompletes from spring semester and summer session must be completed by the last day of fall semester.

The cumulative GPA is the quotient of total points assigned, divided by total hours undertaken, except those courses in which marks of P, NP, W, WU, or I have been given are disregarded in the computation. An F in any course, whether graded pass/fail or on a point scale, is included in the GPA calculation with a point value of 0.00, but the course is not counted toward the total number of required credit hours for graduation. Except as noted in this Section III.F., all course grades are included in the transcript and in the calculation of the GPA, even if the courses have been repeated.

2. Mandatory Means
The faculty has adopted the following mandatory means governing law student grades in College of Law courses:

- First-year doctrinal courses: 2.86–3.06
- First-year Legal Writing and Analysis and Legal Research: 2.96–3.16
- Upper-division courses required for graduation: 2.96–3.16
- Upper Division Advanced Advocacy: 3.06-3.26
- Upper-division courses in which at least 50% of the enrolled students are drafting a paper with the intent to receive Upper Division Writing Requirement certification: 2.96–3.40 recommended but not required
- Upper-division courses designated as Experiential Learning Requirement courses: 2.96–3.40 recommended but not required
- Clinics: no mandatory mean
- All other upper division courses: 2.96–3.40

Any professor who has bona fide reasons for not complying with the applicable mandatory mean may petition the Associate Dean for Faculty to request a waiver. The Associate Dean must agree that a waiver is appropriate in the given situation. It shall be expected that a waiver of the mandatory mean is permitted only in exceptional circumstances.

3. Pass/Fail and Pass/No Pass Courses
The following College courses are graded on a pass/fail or pass/no pass basis:

- Law 817 Academic Skills Lab I (1) P/F
- Law 901 Academic Skills Lab II (1) P/F
- Law 860 Applied Legal Reasoning (3) P/F
- Law 912 Civil Mediation (2) P/F
- Law 913 Family Mediation (2) P/F
- Law 956 Moot Court (1-2) P/F
- Law 958 Trial Advocacy (2) P/F
- Law 973 Field Placement – Individual Study (1–5) P/F
- Law 975 Field Placement – Public Service (1–5) P/F
4. Repeating Law Courses
A student who has received a grade of C-, D+, D, or D- in a law school course may repeat the course once. The grade and credits initially earned in the course will appear on the transcript and be calculated into the GPA. The grade earned in the repeated course will also appear on the transcript, but it will not be included in the calculation of the GPA.

A student who has received an F in a course required for graduation must repeat the course and receive a grade above an F in order to satisfy graduation requirements. A student who has received an F in a course that is not required for graduation may repeat the course once. The grade and credits initially earned in the course will appear on the transcript and be calculated into the GPA. If the student passes the repeated course, the grade and credits earned in the repeated course will also appear on the law school transcript. The credit hours for the repeated course will be applied toward the total number of required credit hours for graduation, but the grade in the repeated course will not be included in the calculation of the GPA.

Students wishing to repeat a law school course in any other situation must first obtain permission of the instructor for that course and Deans of Students.

5. Grade Notification
Final course grades are available only through VandalWeb. Grades are not posted in the law building, nor are they given out over the phone or via e-mail.

6. Appealing Grades
Students dissatisfied with an academic action should first request reconsideration by the appropriate faculty member. However, once grades are assigned, faculty may request a grade change only when a computational or procedural error occurred in assigning the original grade; they may not revise student grades on the basis of reconsideration of previous work, re-examination, or the submission of additional work after the close of the semester. For detailed information, see Article 3.5 of the College of Law Academic Standards.

7. Class Standings
Class standings are computed at the end of fall and spring semesters. Standings are normally processed 4–6 weeks after grades are posted, to allow time for students and faculty to review exams and make any necessary grade changes. Once class standings are determined, they are not processed again, even if grade changes occur after that time. Once processed, class standings are sent to all students by e-mail. Class standings are never given out over the phone.

8. Dean’s List
Students with 10 or more graded credits in a semester who receive a semester GPA of 3.50 or above are recognized by being placed on the Dean’s List. Dean’s List students are listed on the main University website by region; in addition, the University sends Dean’s List notifications to all Idaho newspapers based on student hometowns. Students who prefer less visibility may fill out the University’s Request to Restrict the Disclosure of Directory Information form, requesting that Dean’s List information not be publicized.
9. Transcripts
The University Registrar provides only official transcripts (paper or PDF/electronic); unofficial transcripts can no longer be ordered. Transcript orders may be either (1) submitted in person, by mail, or by fax using the University Transcript Request Form, or (2) submitted online through the National Student Clearinghouse. Allow two days for normal processing. Expedited and additional services require additional — sometimes substantial — fees. All outstanding balances on your student account must be paid before the transcript is released. For more information, visit the Registrar’s Transcripts web page.

Students ordering transcripts should specify whether they want the transcript sent immediately, sent after semester grades are posted, or sent after the degree is granted. In particular, bar applicants must specify that their transcripts be sent after the degree is awarded. Both the paper and online transcript order forms have check boxes allowing this option.

Students may print unofficial web transcripts from VandalWeb free of charge. Because transcripts printed straight off the web do not have a professional appearance, Career Development provides sample formats for submitting professional-looking grade reports to employers who do not require transcripts from the Registrar.

G. Academic Performance

1. Good Academic Standing
Students who entered before Fall 2020 must maintain a cumulative GPA of 2.00 or higher to remain in good academic standing. Students entering in Fall 2020 and thereafter must maintain a cumulative GPA of 2.30 or higher to remain in good academic standing.

Students must be in good academic standing to participate in externships, visit other law schools, participate in ABA-accredited study abroad programs, and to receive their degree. In addition, 1Ls must be in good academic standing to earn pro bono service hours.

2. Fourth Quartile
Students in the fourth quartile at the end of their first semester must register for and pass Law 901 Academic Skills Lab II in their spring 1L semester. Students in this situation will also need to meet with a professor in Academic Success to develop a registration plan prior to registering for courses in their first summer and/or 2L fall course registrations. A hold will be placed on the account of every student who does not meet with a Professor of Academic Success prior to the registration period.

Students whose academic performance places them in the fourth quartile (bottom 25% of the class) at the end of their 1L year are subject to additional graduation requirements designed to ensure they are supported in their efforts to succeed as law students and as lawyers: they may not graduate early, they must meet with a Professor of Academic Success to develop a registration plan prior to course registration every semester, they must pass Law 860 Applied Legal Reasoning, and they must receive a waiver to participate in Semester in Practice. Professors of Academic Success are authorized to place a hold on course registrations. A hold will be placed on the account of every student who does not meet with a Professor of Academic Success prior to each registration period. If a hold is placed, the hold will be removed only after authorization is provided by a Professor of Academic Success following the successful completion of a registration plan.

1Ls whose GPA is 2.50 or below are not eligible to participate in externships (Law 973 and Law 975) in the summer following 1L year. However, they may create their own practice experiences by doing pro bono or volunteering with attorneys. After 1L summer, students need only be in good academic standing to participate in externships.
3. Academic Probation

Students whose cumulative GPA falls below 2.00 (for students entering the College of Law before Fall 2020) or whose cumulative GPA falls below 2.30 (for students entering the College of Law in Fall 2020 and thereafter) for the first time at the conclusion of any semester will be placed on academic probation for the following semester. The Assistant Registrar–Law will send notices of probation to students who fall under this rule.

During the period of probation, students must meet periodically with their Professor of Academic Success as required; in addition, they must meet with either of the Deans of Students as required. Probation students must take actions to improve their academic performance, which will include at a minimum (1) satisfactorily completing an academic self-evaluation, and (2) drafting an academic action plan to improve their performance.

Students on probation must raise their cumulative GPA to 2.00 (for students entering the College of Law before Fall 2020) or 2.30 (for students entering the College of Law in Fall 2020 and thereafter) by the end of the probationary semester to continue at the College of Law.

Students who have been placed on probation are subject to the following graduation requirements: they may not graduate early, they must take Law 860 Applied Legal Reasoning in their final semester, they must take at least 9 credits of core courses each semester, and the Professors of Academic Success must approve their course registration every semester. [See College of Law Academic Standard 3.1 for the list of core courses]. A hold will be placed on the student’s account to effectuate this requirement. Since summer session is not considered a semester, students will not be (1) placed on probation during the summer session, or (2) placed on probation as a result of summer session grades. Likewise, probation students whose summer grades bring their cumulative GPA above the requisite GPA remain on probation through the end of the first semester in which they are enrolled following summer session.

4. Academic Suspension

Students whose cumulative law school GPA falls below 2.00 (for students entering the College of Law before Fall 2020) or whose cumulative GPA falls below 2.30 (for students entering the College of Law in Fall 2020 and thereafter) at the end of or after the probation period are “suspended”: that is, they are academically disqualified and are not eligible to continue their studies at the College of Law. The Assistant Registrar–Law will send notices of suspension to students who fall under this rule.

Since the term “semester” does not include summer session, students can be academically suspended only after fall and spring semesters. Even if the student’s summer session grades bring their cumulative GPA below the requisite GPA, they will not be suspended if, by the end of the following semester in which they enroll, their cumulative GPA is at or above 2.00 (for students entering the College of Law before Fall 2020) or 2.30 (for students entering the College of Law in Fall 2020 and thereafter).

Where students are already enrolled in fall, spring, or summer courses when they are notified of their suspension, the Deans of Students may allow them to continue attending class for a short time solely for the purpose of allowing time to verify final grades. Once final grades are verified, the Deans of Students will work with the Registrar and other University offices to help students withdraw from courses and receive refunds for the withdrawn courses.

Students notified of academic suspension are encouraged to meet with a Professor of Academic Success and/or the College’s Career Development Office, as well as with university career centers, to develop alternative strategies for pursuing their ultimate goals.
H. Academic Petitions and Requests

1. Petitions and Requests to the College of Law
Most academic requirements governing law students are set by the College. Students desiring a waiver from College requirements can make the request to the Deans of Students or to the faculty, depending on the nature of the rule.

The Deans of Students may grant waivers from some College requirements, including:
- The 18-credit maximum per semester requirement
- J.D. graduation requirements such as the 6-semester “in residence” requirement
- Maximum hours of employment rules

Students requesting such waivers should submit the online Dean of Students Approval Form.

Students desiring a waiver from major College requirements, such as academic suspension rules, may petition the faculty by writing a short (1–2 page) memo explaining the action requested and presenting arguments in favor of it. Petitions must be submitted to the Deans of Students within 14 days of receiving notice of the academic action they are petitioning, but at least four business days before the next regularly-scheduled faculty meeting (e.g., Thursday for a Wednesday faculty meeting). At its sole discretion, the faculty may allow the student to present the petition in person. Waivers from major requirements are rarely granted. See Article 7 of the College of Law Academic Standards for more information on waivers.

When in doubt as to the correct procedure, contact your Professor of Academic Success for guidance.

2. Academic Petitions Regarding University Regulations Certain academic regulations are governed by the University, not the College. College of Law deans and faculty have no power to waive these regulations. Such actions include:
- Increasing or reducing the number of credits in a course after the deadline
- Adding or withdrawing from a course after the deadline
- Changing from credit to audit after the deadline
- Withdrawing from the University (i.e., from all courses) after the deadline

Unless specifically instructed otherwise, students petitioning for a waiver of University academic regulations must work with their Professor of Academic Success to present petitions to the University’s Academic Petitions Committee. Academic Petition forms are available at the Registrar’s web page. Under Petition Committee rules, each College presents petitions on behalf of its students rather than students presenting their own petitions. Petitions are heard weekly, and the College will promptly inform students of the Committee’s disposition of their petitions.

I. Graduation Application, Ceremony, and Honors

1. Application for the J.D.
Students planning to graduate should complete the application for degree (available on VandalWeb) at the beginning of the semester they plan to graduate: December graduates should submit the application by early September, and May graduates should complete their applications by late January. A diploma fee will be charged to the applicant’s student account. The Assistant Registrar–Law sends students more information at appropriate times during the semester.

Concurrent degree candidates must fill out a separate graduation application and pay a separate diploma fee for each degree.
2. Commencement Ceremonies
Commencement for College of Law graduates takes place at the University’s commencement ceremonies, held in Moscow in December and May, and held in Boise in May only. Shortly before May Commencement, if the situation permits, the College will host Celebrate the Class awards events in Moscow and Boise. General information on Commencement dates and locations is available on the University Registrar’s website; the College distributes more detailed information as Commencement approaches.

August graduates may, with the Dean’s permission, participate in the May commencement ceremony by completing the Request for Walk Through Commencement form on VandalWeb. Note: Most jurisdictions will not allow you to sit for the July bar exam unless you have graduated in May or June of the same year. If you are contemplating an August graduation, check your jurisdiction for their requirements.

3. Graduation Honors
Graduation honors are given to students whose cumulative GPAs place them within a top percentage of College graduates over the preceding five years. Therefore, the GPA necessary to obtain honors fluctuates from year to year. The Registrar annually calculates the necessary GPA needed to receive graduation honors. Because the GPA fluctuates from year to year, it is possible that honors may not be awarded in a particular category in a given year.

Summa cum laude (with highest distinction) — Top 3% over the preceding five years
Magna cum laude (with great distinction) — Top 6%, but below the top 3%, over the preceding five years
Cum laude (with distinction) — Top 10%, but below the top 6%, over the preceding five years.

IV. Requirements for the J.D.

A. Summary of Requirements for the J.D.

The faculty continually reassesses the curriculum to improve the legal education afforded to UI Law students, but it will not change the requirements for a class that has already matriculated. Therefore, the graduation requirements applicable to classes may differ. This section summarizes the graduation requirements for the Class of 2023 and all subsequent classes. If you entered with a previous class, please confer with your Professor of Academic Success. Students requesting a waiver of any graduation requirement must submit a request using the online Dean of Students Approval Form. Refer to the more detailed information in Section B to learn more about graduation requirements.

You must meet all the following requirements to receive the J.D.:

1. Pass all required courses.
   Required 1L courses:
   • Law 805 Civil Procedure and Introduction to Law (2)

• Law 962  Professional Responsibility (3) (must be taken no later than 2L summer)

2. Complete all required credits:
   a. Complete a minimum of 90 credits;
   b. At least 64 credits must be “classroom credits”;
   c. No more than 21 distance credits may count toward graduation; and
   d. No more than 12 externship credits may count toward graduation.

3. Pass 6 credits of experiential courses.

4. Complete six full-time semesters, or the equivalent.

5. Complete the last two semesters and 26 credits at the College.

6. Perform 50 hours of pro bono service.

7. Satisfy the professionalism requirement.

8. Fulfill the Upper Division Writing Requirement.

9. Additional requirements for students in the fourth quartile:
   a. Pass Law 901 Academic Skills Lab II (1);
   b. Pass Law 860 Applied Legal Reasoning (3);
   c. Courses must be approved every semester;
   d. Students may not graduate early.

10. Fulfill all requirements for the J.D. within six years.

B. Detailed Information on Requirements for the J.D.

1. Pass All Required Courses
See Section A, above, for the required 1L and upper-division courses. All 1L courses must be taken during the first year, unless the Deans of Students authorize otherwise. Any 1L course which is not passed during the first year must be taken the next semester it is offered unless the Deans of Students grant a waiver. Starting with those entering in Fall 2019, students in the fourth quartile have two potential additional required courses: Law 901 Academic Skills Lab II and Law 860 Applied Legal Reasoning.

Students on the Adjusted Curricular Path must complete all 1L courses by the end of their second year and all 2L courses by the end of their third year unless the Deans of Students grant a waiver.
2. Complete All Required Credits

a. Complete a Minimum of 90 Total Credits.

Students must complete a minimum of 90 semester hours of credit either in the College, by transfer from an approved law school, or through pre-approved graduate-level courses.

b. At Least 64 Credits Must Be “Classroom Credits.”

Of the 90 credits needed to graduate, at least 64 must be classroom credits, or “class hours” as defined by the American Bar Association’s Standards for Approval of Law Schools. For non-classroom credits, the following limits apply:

i. A maximum of 12 externship credits may count toward the 90-credit requirement. All externship courses are non-classroom credit, and include Law 973, Law 975, and Law 976.

ii. A maximum of 4 other non-classroom credits from the following list will count toward graduation:
   - Law 981 Critical Legal Studies Journal (1 NC cr, max 4)
   - Law 982 Law Review (1 NC cr, max 4)
   - Law 983 Directed Study (1-2 NC cr, max 4)

iii. A maximum of 2 non-classroom credits from Law 956 Moot Court.

iv. A maximum of 6 credits from non-law graduate-level courses, not earned pursuant to a concurrent or joint degree program.

v. A maximum of 12 credits from non-law graduate-level courses, earned pursuant to a concurrent or joint degree program.

In no event may the number of non-classroom credits counting towards graduation exceed 26 credits.

c. No More Than 21 Distance Credits May Count Toward Graduation.

A maximum of 21 distance credits may count toward graduation. You are not limited in the number of distance credits you may take; however, if you take only the 90 total credits needed to graduate, only 21 may be distance credits. No more than 6 of these credits may come from coursework outside of the College of Law unless those credits are earned pursuant to an approved concurrent degree program. Distance courses may be offered live (such as courses simultaneously offered in Moscow and Boise), online, or by other means: the Assistant Registrar - Law will determine whether a course is considered distance. The distance credit rule applies to both law school and graduate school credits. You must have passed at least 28 credits before you can enroll in a distance education course.

d. Not Over 6 Distance Credits May Come from Course Work Outside the College of Law.

Of the maximum of 21 distance credits that may count toward the J.D., no more than 6 of these may originate outside the College. In other words, not over six distance credits total from graduate courses and courses from other law schools may count toward the J.D. For example, if you have taken two 3-credit online UI graduate courses in addition to one 3-credit online course from another law school, you can apply only six, not nine, of these distance credits to your J.D.
e. No More Than 12 Externship Credits May Count Toward the J.D.

A maximum of 12 externship credits may apply toward the J.D. You are not limited in the number of externship credits you may take in Law 973, Law 975, Law 976, or externships offered by other ABA-accredited law schools as part of study abroad or specialized programs; however, if you take only the 90 total credits needed to graduate, only 12 may be externship credits.

3. Satisfy the Experiential Learning Requirement

Students must satisfy the experiential learning requirement by passing at least six credits from experiential learning courses on the following list:

- Law 855 Water Law Practicum (2-3)
- Law 862 Arbitration Law (3)
- Law 897 Family Justice Clinic (3-6, max 12)
- Law 912 Civil Mediation (2)
- Law 913 Family Mediation (2)
- Law 917 Negotiation and ADR (3)
- Law 932 Estate Planning (3)
- Law 958 Trial Advocacy (2)
- Law 971 Lawyering Process (2)
- Law 973 Field Placement - Independent Study (1-5 NC)
- Law 974 Legal Aid Clinic (3–6, max 12)
- Law 975 Field Placement - Public Service (1–5 NC)
- Law 976 Semester in Practice (1–12 NC)
- Law 978 Entrepreneurship Law Clinic (3–6, max 12)
- Law 986 Judicial Clerkship Seminar (1-2)
- Law 987 Law Practice Management (1-2)
- Law 991* Skills Practicum (credits vary by specific offering)
- Law 995 Community Law Clinic (3–6, max 12)
- Law 996 Immigration Litigation and Appellate Clinic (3–6, max 12)

* Law 991 Skills Practicum is an umbrella for skills courses which are not part of the regular curriculum. The exact content of each skills course will be announced in advance of the semester in which it is offered.

4. Complete Six Full-time Semesters, or the Equivalent

Students must complete six full-time semesters or the equivalent at an ABA-accredited law school. The Deans of Students may waive this requirement for good cause.

For spring and fall semesters, completing a full-time semester means students are enrolled for at least 10 credit hours during the semester, and that they pass at least nine of those hours. For summer session, students must be enrolled for five or more credits to receive credit for full-time study. One full-time summer is equivalent to 1/2 fulltime semester.

See Article 4.1-3 of the College of Law Academic Standards for more specific rules about part-time study and rules governing non-passing work in relation to the six semesters in residence requirement.

5. Complete the Last Two Semesters and 26 Credits at the College

Students must complete their last two semesters and last 26 credits at the College. The Deans of Students may waive this requirement for good cause.

6. Perform Specified Hours of Pro Bono Service

Students must perform a minimum of 50 hours of law-related pro bono service. Pro bono service can normally start any time after the first semester; however, 1Ls must be in good academic standing to earn pro bono service hours. The service requirement must be completed by the start of the sixth semester.

Pro bono service must be provided without compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefit. The pro bono service requirement may be met by providing legal services to any of the following recipients enumerated in ABA Model Rule 6.1:

(a) persons of limited means;
(b) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental, and educational organizations in matters that are designed primarily to address the needs of persons of limited means;
(c) individuals, groups, or organizations seeking to secure or protect civil rights, civil liberties, or public rights; and
(d) charitable, religious, civic, community, governmental, and educational organizations of limited means for furthering their organizational purposes; or by
(e) participation in activities for improving the law, the legal system or the legal profession.

Students may initiate their own pro bono projects or select from pre-approved projects. All self-initiated projects must be approved in advance by the Pro Bono Program Director to qualify for pro bono credit. For more information, visit the Pro Bono Program web page.

7. Satisfy the Professionalism in Legal Education Requirement (PLE)
Students must complete a professionalism education program, which consists of educational opportunities addressing cultural competencies, civility and appropriate professional behaviors, law practice management, bias and thought processes, and other topics related to the development of a student’s professional conduct and identity. 1Ls must participate in all programs included in Orientation, plus a series of professionalism programs for 1Ls offered during their first academic year. Upper division students must attend the annual Professional Development Program and one additional approved event in both their 2L and 3L years. Students will be provided specific information about approved events and other opportunities for the PLE requirement at the beginning of each semester.

8. Fulfill the Upper Division Writing Requirement
Students must satisfy the Upper Division Writing Requirement (UDWR) by completing a major writing project between the end of 1L year and graduation. After you have fulfilled the requirement, you are responsible for having the supervising faculty member sign the Certification of Upper Division Writing Requirement, and for ensuring the certification is turned in to the Assistant Registrar–Law. The deadline to submit your completed Certification is October 1 for December graduates and March 1 for May graduates. Thus, plan on fulfilling your UDWR at least one semester before your planned graduation. Do not assume your supervising faculty member will turn in the certification — it is your responsibility to make sure the signed UDWR certification is received.

The writing project must ordinarily be supervised and graded by a member of the full-time College faculty. Visiting, affiliate, or adjunct faculty may be permitted to supervise and grade a major writing project only when it is conducted as part of a course taught by the faculty member and only with the prior written approval of the Associate Dean for Faculty Development. The UDWR may not be completed in Law 962, Professional Responsibility, or in conjunction with a course that is being used to fulfill the experiential learning requirement. You can only fulfill the UDWR by writing for a UI Law course. Any of the following ways may suffice, but all require the instructor’s agreement to supervise the writing project under UDWR requirements:

- Conducting independent research and writing under the supervision of a full-time faculty member in Law 983 Directed Study.
- Completing the writing requirement for membership in the Idaho Law Review (Law 982) or the Idaho Critical Legal Studies Journal (Law 981).
• Preparing a paper for a regularly scheduled doctrinal course or seminar in which the instructor agrees to accept papers for satisfaction of the UDWR.

Whether you write for a paper course, directed study, or law journal, you must be the exclusive author of the paper you write for the UDWR. You may not obtain any aid in the research, organization, writing, or any other aspect of the paper except for research and editorial assistance expressly approved by the supervising faculty member.

Your writing project must be a paper of at least 20 double-spaced pages exclusive of footnotes, evidencing significant legal or empirical research and thoughtful, well-drafted writing. The paper must reflect your ability to explore, on the basis of significant research in legal sources, the interrelationship of issues presented in a complex context. You must produce a minimum of two drafts. The supervising faculty member will review the first draft and provide you with a detailed critique. In your subsequent draft, you must respond to and remedy the criticisms included in the supervising faculty’s initial critique. Because the supervising faculty member may require additional drafts to bring your paper up to the required standard, do not assume that submitting two drafts will complete your UDWR obligation.

Receiving a passing grade in the course for which you write your UDWR paper does not mean you have satisfied the UDWR — the supervising faculty member must independently certify that the writing project itself satisfies the UDWR. Never assume a paper you write will fulfill the UDWR. Depending on the quality of your drafts, some faculty members may require more than two drafts before certifying that you have satisfied the UDWR. Because of the faculty’s rigorous standards in certifying papers as satisfying the UDWR, you should allow at least two semesters to complete the UDWR.

9. Fulfill Requirements for Fourth-Quartile Students When Applicable
The faculty has adopted several rules to ensure that all students have the best possible chance of successfully sitting for the bar exam.

   a. No Early Graduation. Students whose cumulative GPA falls in the fourth quartile (bottom 25% of the class) at the end of their 1L year (second semester) may not graduate early, even if they have completed the equivalent of six full-time semesters by taking summer courses. This rule applies even where students have successfully raised their academic standing to the top 75% of the class by 3L year.

   b. Additional Required Courses. Beginning with students entering in Fall 2019, fourth quartile students at the end of their first semester must pass Law 901, Academic Skills Lab II (1) and fourth quartile students at the end of their second semester must pass Law 860, Applied Legal Reasoning (3).

   c. Course Approval. Students whose cumulative GPA falls in the fourth quartile at the end of 1L year (second semester) must meet with a Professor of Academic Success to develop a registration plan prior to course registration every semester to ensure the course schedule assists the student in succeeding in law school, passing a bar exam, and practicing law. Professors of Academic Success are authorized to place a hold on course registrations for students who do not meet with a Professor of Academic Success prior to each registration period.

10. Fulfill All Requirements for the J.D. Within Six Years
Students must fulfill all graduation requirements within six years of entering law school. If you must take a leave of absence from the College, work with your Professor of Academic Success to ensure you will meet this requirement. Students must also be in good academic standing to graduate.
V. Academic Planning

A. 1L Academic Plan

All College students must complete an Academic Plan during their second semester. The Academic Plan allows students to design their curriculum and their co-curricular activities in line with their personal goals. On the Academic Plan, students indicate their plans and preferences in regard to:

- Meeting graduation requirements
- Bar preparation
- Skills courses
- Clinics
- Co-curricular activities
- Concurrent degrees
- Emphasis areas
- Externships
- Graduation date
- Pro bono plan
- Upper Division Writing Requirement

While you are not locked into the Academic Plan you complete as a 1L, going through this early, formal planning process helps you control your academic career. When and if you change goals, you will have a deep understanding of the many factors to consider as you prepare for your future as a lawyer.

B. Basic Planning Considerations

1. Plan to Meet Your Personal Goals

Successful law students plan their academic careers to attain their goals. Goals differ between individuals, and no one goal, or set of goals, is right for everyone. While it is common for law students to modify or change their goals during the course of law school, keeping your goals in mind as you plan will help you get the most out of your three years of school. Here are some questions to consider as you plan your law school career:

- What requirements must I meet to receive the J.D.?
- What values matter to me, and how do they affect what I will do during and after law school?
- What courses pique my interest or intellectual curiosity?
- Which professors do I find intellectually stimulating?
- Which lawyers, in and outside the law school, might be good mentors for me?
- Considering my study patterns and non-academic obligations, how many credits should I take?
- What are the best ways of developing the fundamental lawyering skills most critical to me?
- How do I want to fulfill my continuing obligation to help others with my legal training?
- How do I want to use my law degree?
- What type of law do I want to practice?
- What type of clients would I like to serve?
- Where do I intend to practice?
- What subjects are tested on that jurisdiction’s bar exam?

2. Academic Advising

Every lawyer at the College, faculty and J.D. staff alike, is available to help students in their academic planning. Your primary advisors are the Academic Success and Bar Success Professors, who are experts in academic and professional planning. If you want information about meeting graduation requirements, tailoring your studies to your intended field of practice, or preparing for bar admission, these are the people to visit first. In addition, the lawyers in the Career Development Office, because they work closely with both students and legal employers, can offer valuable insights to help you plan in light of your professional goals.

You may also be assigned a 1L faculty mentor. You are not limited to your assigned faculty mentor in seeking academic planning advice. Faculty bring not only a deep knowledge of their doctrinal area and College courses, but also expertise stemming from their experiences as practicing lawyers.

Students in emphasis and concurrent programs have assigned faculty advisors, who provide specific guidance for advisees in their emphasis or concurrent program throughout law school.

While you should take advantage of advising, note that students bear the primary responsibility for their own academic planning, which includes determining which courses to take (and when), making timely progress toward the J.D., ensuring that all graduation requirements are met, and preparing for the bar exam.

3. Cultivating Mentors

Actively cultivate at least three lawyer mentors among the faculty, J.D. staff, and practicing lawyers you meet during your time in law school. Mentors are experienced lawyers with whom you build a personal relationship. Talk with professors informally, attend presentations where the faculty talk about their scholarship or professional experiences, attend Career Development workshops, and take advantage of the many opportunities to meet distinguished lawyers who give lectures and presentations at the College. Don’t limit your search for mentors to those interested in the legal fields that interest you; also seek mentors whose professional judgment you trust, whose values you share, or whose activities you enjoy. Mentors should be willing to give you advice and direction, pass on what they have learned in their law practice, and write letters of recommendation. You will benefit by getting advice from mentors who know you, your interests, and your values.

4. Advising Materials and Presentations

All students should read and become familiar with the academic planning information in the following sections of this College of Law Student Handbook:

- Section IV Requirements for the J.D.
- Section V Academic Planning
- Section VI Becoming Practice Ready: Developing Lawyering Skills
- Section VII Emphasis Areas
- Section VIII Concurrent Degree Programs
- Section IX Planning for Law Practice
- Section X Planning for Bar Admission
- Section XI Course Listings and Course Descriptions

Other advising materials are also available:

- Registration materials, such as the registration memo and draft course and exam schedule
- Official communications from the Deans, advisors, and Assistant Registrar–Law
- Materials on the Academic Administration web page
- Informal degree audits, available on VandalWeb
- Formal degree audits performed by the Assistant Registrar–Law after timely receiving a student’s application for the J.D.

The College periodically holds meetings to impart advising information. These include not only required academic planning, career development, and pro bono workshops but also voluntary sessions on more specific topics such as emphases, concurrent programs, and clinical and practice-specific opportunities. To build not only your knowledge but also a networking base, take advantage of bar admissions workshops, career development workshops, and presentations by attorneys invited by student organizations.

5. Course Selection

After taking required 1L and 2L courses, students are largely free to design their academic schedules in light of their own interests. (While students in the fourth quartile of each class must meet with an Academic Success professor to review their registration plan, they still have considerable flexibility in designing a schedule.) The information in this section can help you make informed choices about courses and experiences you may want as a 2L or 3L. Remember, these are general guidelines, not specific requirements. Tailor your individual course loads to your goals and interests.

Keep these considerations in mind in selecting courses:

- Use your personal goals to guide your course choices, including the type of substantive law you wish to practice.
- Consider the sequence of courses. In general, take introductory courses before highly specialized ones. Take any prerequisites for a course before taking the course itself.
- Consider the pace of law study. Students who take 14–16 credits a semester can graduate in the standard three years and be eligible for limited licenses by the start of 2L summer.
- Consider your interest in the subject matter or the professor. Your law school experiences will be most rewarding if you are stimulated by your courses.
- Consider the skills you want to develop for your legal career. Use both your courses and law school activities to develop fundamental lawyering skills such as efficient researching, planning factual investigations, fluent oral communication, effective writing, or client counseling.
- Consider the importance of fundamental courses (“bar” and “core” courses). Remember, to be a great lawyer, you must first become a lawyer—which means passing the bar exam.

C. Course Sequencing

Take course sequencing into account when planning your course of study. Keep in mind:

- Students must pass required 1L courses in the first two years of law study. Adjusted Curriculum students must finish all 1L courses in the first two years and all 2L courses in the first three years. The following courses must be taken during 2L year:
  - Law 859 Advanced Advocacy
  - Law 905 Constitutional Law II
  - Law 950 Evidence
  - Law 962 Professional Responsibility
- The College cannot guarantee that students who take required courses out of sequence will not have a conflict with another required or desired course.
- During 2L year, take courses that are prerequisites for courses you wish to take as a 3L.
- Many post-2L employment and externship opportunities anticipate that students will have completed Law 953 Criminal Procedure: Investigations during 2L year.
- Review prerequisites for Clinic.

D. Summer Law Study

Many options for academic credit are available over the summer, including doctrinal courses, externships, dispute resolution courses, legal aid clinic, directed study, study abroad, and study at other law schools. Students enrolled for five or more law credits during summer session receive credit for 1/2 of a fulltime semester “in residence.”

It’s important to know these facts about University of Idaho summer fees:

- Summer school fees, unlike fees for the fall and spring semesters, are charged on a flat per-credit basis, with identical fees for Idaho residents and non-residents.
There is no upper limit on summer fees. This contrasts with fall and spring semesters, where there is an upper cap on fees — fulltime fall and spring fees are identical for students whether they are taking 10 or 18 credits.

Law students taking any University summer course pay law fees for all credits, even for undergraduate and wellness-type courses. Therefore, students should be judicious in registering for summer courses outside the College of Law.

During summer terms, financial aid is available only for students registered for 5 or more credits. Students planning to earn summer credits — whether through doctrinal summer courses, externships, transfer credits, graduate courses, or study abroad — should ask Student Financial Aid Services to spread out their Federal Direct Student Loan funds over fall, spring, and summer. In the alternative, they should carefully budget during the fall and spring semester, so they have residual funds available for summer. No additional Federal Direct Student Loan monies are available for students who have exhausted these loans during fall and spring semesters, but students may be able to receive additional Graduate PLUS loans subject to creditworthiness. Contact Student Financial Aid Services for more information.

Registration deadlines for summer session are extremely compressed. Usually classes must be added or dropped, or credits changed in variable-credit courses, within one or two days of the start of classes. More information about the University’s summer sessions is available at the University’s Summer Session website.

1. Doctrinal Courses at the College of Law

   Two or more doctrinal law courses are offered each summer session at both the Moscow and Boise locations. All courses offered are at the discretion of the faculty. Summer courses are usually taught on a compressed schedule of between five and eight weeks per session, with classes usually taught 4–5 days a week.

2. Summer Externships

   The most popular summer externship, Law 975 Field Placement – Public Service, which is open to both 1Ls and 2Ls, requires students to work for a field supervisor full-time for eight weeks, whatever the number of credits earned. For more information, see Section VI.E.1., Externships, and the course description for Law 975. 1Ls whose GPA is 2.50 or below are not eligible to participate in externships (Law 973 or Law 975) in the summer following 1L year. However, they may create their own practice experiences by doing pro bono or volunteering with attorneys. After 1L summer, students need only be in good academic standing to participate in summer externships.

3. Dispute Resolution Courses

   The Northwest Institute for Dispute Resolution holds courses open to law students, lawyers, and other professionals during the week following the end of spring semester exams. Two 2-credit mediation courses, Law 912 Civil Mediation and Law 913 Family Mediation, are offered. Students may not take both Law 912 (Civil Mediation) and Law 913 (Family Mediation) for credit.

   Enrollment is limited. Students interested in Northwest Institute dispute resolution courses should contact the Legal Aid Clinic early in Spring semester to be placed on the interest list. If there is more interest than the available seats, priority is given to active members of Law Students for Appropriate Dispute Resolution, and then to other students based on their position on the interest list.

4. Clinics

   A few summer positions are usually available in the Community Law Clinic and in the Family Justice Clinic. Students interested in participating in Clinic during the summer should contact the Legal Aid Clinic early in their fourth semester to determine if positions will be available. See Section VI.C., Clinics.
5. Directed Study
Full-time law faculty who remain at the College during the summer may be available to supervise Law 983 Directed Study. Because many faculty members do research or are otherwise unavailable during the summer, students considering taking Directed Study during the summer should contact a faculty member early in the spring semester to determine if they will be available to supervise a summer project.

6. Study Abroad or Summer Study at Other Law Schools
See Section III.B.3, UI Law Students Visiting at Other Law Schools, and Section III.B.4, Study Abroad. In particular, note that the College is affiliated with Gonzaga Law’s summer study abroad program in Florence, Italy.

VI. Becoming Practice Ready: Developing Lawyering Skills

A. Fundamental Lawyering Skills
Students should develop their professional conduct, identity, and skills while in law school. Developing practical lawyering skills is so important that ABA Standard 303(a)(3) requires that all law students complete at least 6 credit hours of experiential courses. The ABA has identified the following ten “fundamental lawyering skills essential for competent representation”:

- problem solving
- legal analysis
- legal research
- factual investigation
- communication
- counseling
- negotiation
- litigation and alternative dispute resolution
- organizational, administrative, and time management skills
- recognizing and resolving ethical dilemmas

Students can develop valuable lawyering skills not only through taking courses, but also through participating in student organizations and other activities. See below and Section IV.B.3, Satisfy the Experiential Learning Requirement, for more information.

B. Legal Intern Limited Licenses
Legal intern programs allow qualified law students to engage in the limited practice of law under the supervision of a qualified law school professor or member of a state bar.

All of the Clinics at the College require participating students to obtain an Idaho limited license. Likewise, many externship and paid positions following the 2L year also require students to have a limited license from the state of practice, whether Idaho or another jurisdiction.

Each state sets its own requirements for a limited license. Students wishing to practice as legal interns in a state should consult that state’s bar association for information, qualifications, and application forms.

To be eligible for a limited license in any state, students must complete at least 2/3 of the credits needed for graduation. Because the College requires 90 credits to graduate, students seeking a limited license must have a minimum of 60 credits by the end of 2L year.

If you need a limited license, the College of Law must verify to the bar licensing authority that you will have completed 60 credits by the start date of your limited license. It is your responsibility to facilitate this verification. To facilitate verification of your credits so that you may obtain a Limited License in Idaho, you must do the following:

1. Review the Idaho State Bar’s Limited License Website.
2. Download the most recent application on the ISB website under the Applicant Packet Tab.
3. Read the Instructions provided on the same page and tab.
4. Fill out the application.
5. For the Dean’s affidavit:
   - Send your entire application to Assistant Registrar-Law, Sande Schlueeter, sandes@uidaho.edu. She will verify your credits and obtain the needed signature. She will then contact you to let you know when the final page is ready for pick-up.
   - Please note, if this is your first limited license application, you will need to pay the Idaho State Bar $25. The ISB takes up to four weeks to process Limited License Applications, so keep this in mind when you are applying.

C. Clinics

Clinical courses allow students to work under the supervision of law faculty or outside practitioners on actual cases. All clinics allow the student to partially or totally fulfill the experiential learning requirement. In 2021-2022, five clinics are available: Community Law Clinic (Moscow), Immigration Litigation & Appellate Clinic (Moscow), Family Justice Clinic (Boise), Housing Law Clinic (Boise), and Entrepreneurship Clinic (Boise). Not all clinics are offered every semester, and course offerings are subject to change based on grant funding.

Clinics are normally only available to students in their third year of law school. A limited number of clinic positions are available during summer session. Preference is typically given to students who are able to participate in Clinic over two semesters (Fall/Spring or Summer/Fall). Students may participate in a clinic and an externship during the same semester only with the approval of both the clinic and externship instructors.

Students interested in a clinic are encouraged to meet with clinic faculty during 1L and 2L year and to visit the Clinic website for announcements and information.

Clinics follow a uniform application process. Clinic faculty hold informational meetings early in spring semester, which all interested 2Ls should attend. Students apply for clinic placements, and may have optional interviews with the faculty supervisor for their clinic(s) of choice. Placements are announced prior to spring break. Note that not all students can be placed in their first-choice clinic.

All clinics have course prerequisites: check the course descriptions in Section XI.B, Course Descriptions. Prerequisites may be waived in exceptional circumstances. By the time they begin Clinic, students must also be qualified for, and have applied for, an Idaho Legal Intern Limited License.

The Clinic accepts cases and makes other commitments based on the assumption that students selected for a clinic will enroll in it and complete the semesters for which they applied. Students unsure of whether they will be able to fulfill the commitment should indicate that fact on their applications.

D. Clinical Labs

Clinical Labs (Law 977) are “mini-clinics” which offer 2Ls and 3Ls an opportunity to assist persons involved with the courts. No limited license is required. Clinical Labs are typically taught by practitioners with extensive experience in the subject matter of the lab, and are offered on an intermittent basis.

E. Externships

The Extern Program bridges the gap between theory and practice by affording students the opportunity to work on a close, personal basis with judges or practicing attorneys in public service positions. Externship opportunities include summer placements through Law 975 Field Placement – Public Service, as well as semester-long placements through Law 976 Semester in Practice and Law 973 Field Placement – Independent Study. Each course includes a field placement component that encompasses (1) observation of and immersion in the day-to-day workings of a participating organization, (2) professional interaction between the student and the field placement supervisor, and (3) involvement in specific legal problems and the resolution of those problems.

Students may participate in multiple externships, such as two summer externships or a summer externship and Semester in Practice. However, no more than 12 total credits from all externship programs combined can count toward the 90 credits required for the J.D. Students may not participate in clinics and externships during the same semester without the approval of both the clinic and externship instructors.

Law 973, Law 975 and Law 976 allow the student to partially or totally fulfill the experiential learning requirement.

Externship positions are unpaid. Students may receive scholarships during summers or semesters they are enrolled in externships. Students may receive stipends to offset out-of-pocket expenses incurred because of participating in an externship (for example, a travel or housing stipend). Externships at private law firms will be considered on a case-by-case basis to assess whether the opportunity meets the educational criteria for a public service externship. The Director of Externships has discretion to approve or deny any proposed externship placement after consulting with a committee designated to assist in making those decisions. With the prior approval of the Pro Bono Program Director, students working at qualified field placement sites may earn pro bono credit for unpaid work done at the field placement after all externship requirements have been fulfilled.

1. Summer Externships

During the summer term, students may participate in a Law 975 Field Placement – Public Service.

Student placements with pre-approved placement sites are subject to the approval of the field supervisor. In addition, students may also work with the Faculty Director to arrange placements with a willing field supervisor of their choice; such placements are subject to the Faculty Director’s approval.

Law 975 is a 1-5 non-classroom credit course. Students may sign up for fewer than 5 credits if they wish, but the number of credits will not be increased or decreased past the add/drop deadline (which is also the last day to change variable credits) as shown on the University’s Summer Session web page. Students considering changing their externship credit load must act quickly, for the credit change/drop deadline is usually only a few days after the start of summer classes.

Students in Law 975 must work full-time for eight weeks providing legal research or law-related assistance to field placement supervisors. Students may register for 1–5 credits for the class, but whatever the number of credits, they must complete eight fulltime weeks. Students must also submit weekly writing requirements and attend periodic classes, some of which may be taught as evening or weekend classes during the spring semester preceding the summer externship. Law 975 provides experiential learning credit.

2. Fall and Spring Externships

Students may participate in either of two externship courses during fall and spring semesters, Law 976 Semester in Practice or Law 973 Field Placement – Independent Study.

- Law 976, Semester in Practice. 3L students in good academic standing may spend a Semester in Practice externing with an approved public agency or nonprofit organization. Fourth quartile students are not eligible to participate in Semester in Practice. There is a waiver process to request an exception to the fourth quartile rule; however, that exception is rarely granted. For more information on how to petition, please contact one of the Faculty Directors.
Semester in Practice students typically work full-time for 14 to 16 weeks in their field placement; a part-time schedule must be approved by the field supervisor and Faculty Director. Most positions require the student to be qualified for a Legal Intern Limited License. In addition, students must fulfill other requirements including attending periodic classes, submitting periodic assignments, and making a classroom presentation.

Student placements are subject to the approval of the field supervisor. In addition, students may also work with a Faculty Director to arrange externships with a willing field supervisor of their choice; such placements are subject to the Faculty Director’s approval.

- Law 973, Field Placement – Independent Study. Upper-division students may participate in Law 973 during fall or spring semesters for 1–5 non-classroom credits by providing legal research or law-related assistance to a field placement supervisor. The number of hours required for the field placement will vary depending upon credits.

F. Simulation Courses

Simulation courses allow students to develop lawyering skills within a simulated lawyering environment. Many (though not all) of these courses allow students to partially or totally fulfill the experiential learning graduation requirement. See Section IV.B.3 Requirements for the J.D.: Detailed Information on Requirements for the J.D. – Satisfy the Experiential Learning Requirement. The College offers the following simulation courses:

- Law 855 Water Law Practicum (2-3)
- Law 912 Civil Mediation (2)
- Law 913 Family Mediation (2)
- Law 917 Negotiation and ADR (3)
- Law 932 Estate Planning (3)
- Law 954 Trial Skills (3)
- Law 958 Trial Advocacy (2)
- Law 967 Advanced Legal Writing (2)
- Law 970 Advanced Legal Research (2)
- Law 971 Lawyering Process (2)
- Law 986 Judicial Clerkship Seminar (2)
- Law 987 Law Practice Management (1-2)
- Law 991 Skills Practicum (credits vary by specific offering)

Law 991 Skills Practicum is an umbrella for skills courses which are not part of the regular curriculum. The exact content of each skills course will be announced in advance of the semester in which it is offered.

G. Moot Court, Mock Trial, and Other Competitions

The College’s competitions are generally organized by student organizations, who should work with their faculty supervisor and the Deans of Students to understand the process for representing our College at competitions.

1. Law 956, Moot Court

Moot Court consists of participation in interscholastic moot court competitions. The number of competitions and teams may vary depending upon resources and College priorities. Moot Court does not provide experiential learning credits. Note that Moot Court credits must be taken in the semester they are earned and a student cannot receive credit for the same moot court twice. The credits earned in Law 956 are non-classroom credits.
2. Dispute Resolution Competitions
The College’s dispute resolution competitions, sponsored by the American Bar Association, are run by Law Students for Appropriate Dispute Resolution (“LSADR”), a student organization. Teams receive faculty guidance but no school credit. Each year, LSADR holds an intramural Negotiation Competition and an intramural Mediation Competition, both judged by local lawyers and dispute resolution practitioners. The top teams advance to regional competitions, and if successful, to national competitions.

H. Law Journals and Other Intensive Writing Experiences

1. Law Journals
   a. Law 981, Critical Legal Studies Journal, The Idaho Critical Legal Studies Journal, a/k/a “The Crit,” is an online critical legal studies journal covering topics of national interest. Membership is offered to students based upon their submissions during the write-on process. Members must participate in technical training sessions, fulfill assigned editing hours, and complete a paper of publishable quality. Each 2L member may apply for a functionally specialized job at the beginning of spring semester and is mentored for the duration of the semester to be able to take over the functional position by summer. All editors participate in determining the strategy and future of the journal, soliciting submissions, editing submissions for publication, organizing and coordinating journal clubs, completing technical tasks, and engaging with the student body regarding critical studies. Members register for one non-classroom credit each semester they participate in the law journal, up to a maximum of four credits. Credits must be taken in the semester in which they are earned.

   b. Law 982, Law Review, The Idaho Law Review publishes on a wide range of legal topics, especially those of interest to Idaho practitioners. Law Review requires a two-year commitment. Associate membership on the Idaho Law Review is offered to the top 10 students by cumulative GPA at the end of 1L year who have signed a letter of intent to be considered as candidates, as well as to the top 10 students selected from a write-on competition in the summer following 1L year. Associate members (2Ls) must participate in technical training sessions, fulfill assigned editing hours, and complete a paper of publishable quality. Students who complete all the duties required of associate members become full members as 3Ls. Full members must complete editing assignments of student and lead articles, assist in conducting technical training sessions, contact and solicit outside authors, research and assist the executive editor in obtaining applicable topics for the associate members, and complete all other duties associated with publishing the journal. Both associate and full members register for one non-classroom credit each semester they participate in the law journal, up to a maximum of four credits. Credits must be taken in the semester in which they are earned.

2. Law 983, Directed Study
   Students may engage in independent research and writing under the supervision of a full-time faculty member in Law 983 Directed Study. Directed study is especially appropriate for students who wish to delve more deeply into a subject than is possible in the College’s regular courses, or who have an interest in subjects not covered by the College’s regular courses. Individual faculty members set their own requirements for directed study and interested students interested should contact professors directly. All course requirements for Directed Study must be completed within one semester, even if students must spend additional time in subsequent semesters improving the paper to meet standards for UDWR certification. A directed study that is the continuation of a paper course project may not earn over one credit; a stand-alone directed study project is normally entitled to two credits. Students may earn up to two non-classroom credits in any individual Directed Study, up to a maximum of four credits.
I. Leadership Experiences

By taking leadership roles in student organizations, students may hone organizational skills while forging important ties with the larger legal community. The Student Bar Association (“SBA”), the law school student government body, offers students myriad leadership opportunities from governance to event planning. In addition, leadership opportunities abound with over 20 recognized student organizations. Student organizations participate in public service, bring distinguished speakers to the College, build community awareness of important issues, and more. Students may also wish to expand their professional networks and build lawyering skills by participating in organizations outside the law school such as bar sections, the American Bar Association Law Student Division, and specialty groups of attorneys such as the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association.

VII. Emphasis Areas

A. General Information

The College of Law offers three areas of emphasis:

- Business Law
- Native American Law
- Natural Resources and Environmental Law

Emphases are the functional equivalent of certificate programs or majors: they allow students to pursue an in-depth course of study in one area of law. The emphasis is shown on the law school transcript. (However, any individual track offered within the emphasis will not appear on the transcript.) At a minimum, students pursuing an emphasis area will take a combination of required and elective courses and write a major paper within the area of emphasis; some emphases have additional requirements.

Please note that a course’s inclusion in a list of courses, below, is not a guarantee that the course will be offered regularly. In addition, the faculty may add or subtract courses as the curriculum changes. Finally, the course numbers associated with listed courses may change.

This Handbook summarizes emphasis programs. For updated, comprehensive information, and for the forms necessary to evidence completion of the various requirements, see the official emphasis documents provided by emphasis advisors.

B. Business Law Emphasis

The Business Law and Entrepreneurship emphasis provides a structured set of courses, faculty mentorship, and practical skills opportunities for students who wish to develop substantive knowledge and practical experience in business law and entrepreneurship. BLE students must choose one track on which to focus their coursework: Transactional Law or Intellectual Property Law. The BLE emphasis is available to law students in Moscow and Boise.

BLE emphasis advisors are Professors Mark Adams, Wendy Couture, Rachelle Ketchum, Deborah McIntosh, Jessica McKinlay, Tim Murphy, and Richard Seamon. Students are not guaranteed a particular BLE emphasis advisor.

The BLE emphasis requires a combination of mandatory meetings, mandatory doctrinal and skills courses, additional courses by track, and a major writing project. Some seminars and practicums have been previously offered and pre-approved as satisfying the skills requirement or track electives for the BLE emphasis. The specific seminars or practicums offered in a given semester which will satisfy BLE requirements will be announced in advance of registration so students can plan accordingly.

Students must apply for the BLE emphasis no later than the end of 2L year.
The BLE emphasis requires the following:

(1) Mandatory, documented meetings with the assigned BLE emphasis advisor at least once per semester. It is the student’s responsibility to initiate contact with the advisor to schedule this meeting.

(2) Mandatory grade requirement: BLE emphasis students must earn
• a minimum grade of C+ in each course taken to satisfy emphasis requirements, and
• a cumulative 2.80 grade point average over all courses used to satisfy BLE emphasis requirements.

The Native American Law emphasis provides an in-depth examination into topics in federal, tribal, and state law that directly or indirectly implicate issues in Native American Law. The Native American Law emphasis is available to law students in Moscow.

The Native American Law emphasis adds to the law student’s base of knowledge on a variety of issues, including the basics of criminal law in tribal territories where federal, tribal and state law may intersect; the extent of tribal civil jurisdiction in various contexts; tribal authority under major federal environmental statutes; intergovernmental agreements between tribes and states; the legal landscape concerning tribal economic development; the continuing vitality of tribal treaty rights; and many other topics.

D. Natural Resources and Environmental Law (NREL) Emphasis

The Natural Resources and Environment Law emphasis is designed to meet the growing demand for expertise in natural resource and environmental law issues. Law graduates with expertise in the field will be more competitive in the legal market and better equipped to solve growing problems in these increasingly technical fields. The emphasis focuses study on natural resource and environmental law while leaving room to also develop a broad background in the law and to prepare adequately for bar passage. The NREL emphasis is available to law students in Moscow and Boise.
In the NREL application, students specify their area of interest and preferred advisor, who should be at their location (Moscow or Boise). While the NREL faculty is usually successful in assigning students with preferred advisors, students are not guaranteed their choice of a particular advisor. The NREL emphasis advisors are Professors Dylan Hedden-Nicely, Stephen Miller, Richard Seamon, and Jerrold Long.

Students must apply for the NREL emphasis no later than the end of 1L year.

The NREL emphasis requires the following:

(1) Mandatory grade requirement: NREL emphasis students must earn
   • a minimum grade of C+ in each course taken to satisfy emphasis requirements, plus
   • a cumulative 2.80 grade point average over all courses used to satisfy NREL emphasis requirements.

(2) Required courses:
   • Law 907 Administrative Law (3) (preferably in the 2L year)

Under the supervision (and with the pre-approval) of the student’s NREL Emphasis Advisor, the student must complete a major research paper meeting the requirements of the Upper Division Writing Requirement. The paper, whether written for a paper course or Law 981 Critical Legal Studies Journal, Law 982 Law Review, or Law 983 Directed Study, may also be used to satisfy the Upper Division Writing Requirement.

VIII. Concurrent Degree Programs

A. General Information

The College of Law Student Handbook summarizes concurrent degree programs. For updated, comprehensive information, see the official concurrent degree documents provided by program advisors. Concurrent degree programs allow students to earn a J.D. and another graduate or professional degree in less time than would otherwise be required. This is possible because selected credits from one program can be used to satisfy credit requirements for the other program. Students pursuing any concurrent degree program must work closely with the Deans of Students and the law advisor for the particular concurrent degree program.

Applicants for any concurrent degree program must apply separately for admission to the College of Law and to the other college involved. After being admitted into both colleges, the student may then apply for the concurrent program, using the Dean of Students Approval Form (see below). Admission to a concurrent program is dependent on a demonstrated ability to excel in an intense, interdisciplinary educational environment. Students must apply to concurrent degree programs either not later than May 1 of their 1L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Fall of their 2L year, or not later than October 1 of their 2L year, for those starting the concurrent degree in Spring of their 2L year. Students may not begin a concurrent degree later than Spring of their 2L year.

Under ABA accreditation rules which cannot be waived, students may not receive credit toward the J.D. for any courses taken before they matriculate in law school. Therefore, concurrent degree students should complete one year of law school before taking any credits in other colleges under concurrent degree programs.

Students must satisfy the degree requirements of each college in order to receive both degrees. In each concurrent degree program, some J.D. credits are applied to the master’s or doctoral degree, and some graduate credits are applied toward the J.D. Unless expressly approved as part of the concurrent degree program, students in concurrent degree programs may not apply any external (non-law) externship credits toward the 90 credits required for the J.D. Students must complete both degrees in order to receive the maximum credits. Students who fail to complete the other degree may be able to count a maximum of six credits from the other college toward a J.D., but only with the approval of the Deans of Students. Concurrent degree candidates must fill out a separate graduation application (and pay a separate fee) for each degree.

Law credit for approved graduate-level courses will be granted only if the student receives a grade of B or higher, and the courses will be recorded on the law transcript with a grade of P.

Students pursuing a concurrent degree at the University of Idaho must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form indicating the concurrent degree the student wishes to pursue:
   - not later than May 1 of their 1L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Fall of their 2L year, or
   - not later than October 1 of their 2L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Spring of their 2L year.
   - Students may not begin a concurrent degree later than Spring of their 2L year.

2) In every semester in which the student takes a graduate-level course which can be applied to the J.D. and/or in which the student takes a law course which can be applied to the graduate degree, fill out the Credit Reservation Request form and submit to the Assistant Registrar-Law not later than the 10th day of the semester.
3) If seeking to apply to the J.D. credits earned in a course not listed in the pre-approved graduate courses for the concurrent degree, submit the Dean of Students Approval Form (before the start of the semester) and:

- indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
- affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed; and
- include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take.

Students pursuing a concurrent degree at an institution other than the University of Idaho must:

1) Submit the Dean of Students Approval Form indicating the concurrent degree the student wishes to pursue:

   - no later than May 1 of their 1L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Fall of their 2L year, or
   - no later than October 1 of their 2L year, for students starting the concurrent degree in Spring of their 2L year.

   Students may not begin a concurrent degree later than Spring of their 2L year.

2) The Assistant Registrar-Law will follow-up with additional paperwork and instructions.

   - Complete and submit that paperwork (including the initial Consortium Agreement and the Transfer Credit Information form) no later than the 10th day of the first semester in which the concurrent degree is sought. Note: A Consortium Agreement must be submitted even if the student is not receiving financial aid.

3) For every semester in which the student takes graduate-level courses which will be applied to the J.D., fill out and submit a Consortium Agreement no later than the 10th day of the semester.

4) If seeking to apply to the J.D. credits earned in a course not listed in the pre-approved graduate courses for the concurrent degree, submit the Dean of Students Approval Form before the start of the semester:

   - Indicate how the course relates to the student’s course of study;
   - Affirm that it does not duplicate courses offered by the College of Law and that it does not duplicate other undergraduate or graduate courses the student has completed; and
   - Include the course number, course title, course description, number of credits, and mode of delivery (in-person, online synchronous, online asynchronous) of the course the student wants to take.

5) For every semester in which the student takes graduate-level courses which will be applied to the J.D., when the course is complete and final grades have been submitted, arrange to have an official transcript mailed to:

   Sande Schlueter
   Assistant Registrar-Law
   875 Perimeter Drive, MS 2321
   Moscow, ID 83844-2321

   Note: Under very limited circumstances – generally, when the concurrent degree will be completed in four rather than three years – it may be permissible to wait and send one transcript once you have completed all classes you intend to transfer to UI and apply to the J.D. Contact the Assistant Registrar-Law for details.
B. Academic Conduct

Students enrolled in all concurrent degree programs are subject to the College of Law Honor Code. All other University of Idaho standards, student codes, and regulations also apply.

In all concurrent degree programs, if either college disciplines a student for any reason, the administration from each college involved will review the actions and decide the student’s status in the concurrent program. Students enrolled in a concurrent program must agree to waive their rights to confidentiality to the extent necessary to effectuate this provision.

C. Concurrent Degrees Offered

The College of Law currently offers the following concurrent degrees:

- In Moscow, at UI
  1. J.D./MACCT (Master of Accountancy) with the University of Idaho Department of Accounting
  2. J.D./M.S. in Applied Economics with the University of Idaho College of Agricultural and Life Sciences
  3. J.D./M.S. in Environmental Science with the University of Idaho Department of Environmental Science
  4. J.D./M.S. in Water Resources and J.D./Ph.D. in Water Resources with the University of Idaho College of Graduate Studies, involving seven UI colleges
  5. J.D./PSM (Professional Science Masters) in Natural Resources and Environmental Science with the University of Idaho Professional Science Masters Program

- In Boise, at BSU
  1. J.D./M.B.A. (Master of Business Administration) with the Boise State University College of Business and Economics
  2. J.D./MSAT (Master of Science in Accountancy, Taxation) with Boise State University College of Business and Economics

- In both locations, at UI and WSU
  1. J.D./MPA with the University of Idaho Department of Politics and Philosophy

D. Tuition and Fee Information and Financial Aid Information Specific to the Boise State University and Washington State University Concurrent Degree Programs

PLEASE NOTE: For concurrent degrees pursued with BSU or WSU, the student pays applicable tuition and fees at both institutions.

Students pursuing a concurrent degree with an institution other than the University of Idaho (currently, Boise State University for the J.D./MBA and the J.D./MSAT and Washington State University for the J.D./MBA) must be aware of special provisions so they receive full financial aid. These provisions are vital because financial aid can only be awarded for courses that count toward the degree of the university granting the financial aid. (Note that students in the UI concurrent degree programs are not affected because their courses all apply to degrees awarded by the University of Idaho, and their full-time tuition and fees cover all courses taken.)

Students pursuing the J.D./MBA with either Boise State University or Washington State University should be aware of the following: For the concurrent J.D./MBAs available with Boise State University and Washington State University, the University of Idaho is the financial aid “home” of the student pursuing those concurrent degrees, through all semesters. When a student takes courses at BSU or WSU... in pursuit of the concurrent degree, they will pay tuition and fees to BSU or WSU, but are eligible for financial aid through UI. The tuition and fees owed for courses taken at UI will come directly out of the financial aid award, and then the student will still need to pay tuition and fees to BSU or WSU for the courses taken at that other institution.

Given that, the student pursuing a J.D./MBA with either institution will want to structure their studies so that in each semester, they take sufficient credits that count toward the J.D. in order to equal the minimum number of credits (10 in Fall or Spring) to be eligible for full-time financial aid through UI. That minimum number of credits counting toward the J.D. can consist solely of courses taken at the College of Law, or of courses taken at BSU or WSU that will count toward the J.D., or some combination of courses taken at the College of Law and courses taken at the other institution that count toward the J.D.

In order to “count toward the J.D.,” the courses at the other institution must be approved for credit toward the J.D. (see the list of approved courses in the section on each concurrent degree) and the student cannot have already applied 12 such credits toward the J.D. (12 being the maximum number of non-law graduate credits that can applied toward achieving the J.D. – any in excess of that number can no longer be said to “count” toward the J.D.)

Refer to the instructions for “Students pursuing a concurrent degree at an institution other than the University of Idaho” under in Section VIII.A., above, to be sure you have completed all additional paperwork necessary to be sure you can apply credits taken at BSU or WSU to the UI J.D.

Students pursuing the J.D./MSAT with Boise State University should take the following steps, so their courses are covered by financial aid:

- After 1L year, when applying for the FAFSA, list the institution codes for both University of Idaho and Boise State University. This will allow you to access financial aid at either institution during the year.
- Each semester (or summer term) you may apply for financial aid at only one university — even if you are taking classes at both University of Idaho and BSU. Therefore, the classes you take every semester or summer (whether at UI, BSU, or both) need to all count toward the degree at the university where you are receiving financial aid.
- Strategically plan out your semesters and summers to make sure you meet the 5-credit minimum (for part-time financial aid) or 10-credit minimum (for a full-time financial aid award) needed at the university from which you are receiving financial aid.
- Refer to the instructions for “students pursuing a concurrent degree at an institution other than the University of Idaho” in Section VIII (A), above, to be sure you have completed all additional paperwork necessary to be sure you can apply credits taken at BSU to the UI J.D.

For additional help with how to structure your courses to meet financial aid requirements, make an appointment with the Director of Student Affairs-Boise, and/or with a UI Financial Aid Counselor.

4. J.D./M.S. and J.D./Ph.D. in Water Resources with University of Idaho Water Resources Program

Please first read the information in Sections VIII.A and B. above concerning general information and academic conduct rules applicable to all concurrent degree applicants and students.

The Water Resources graduate program provides interdisciplinary study options in water resources through the Colleges of Agricultural & Life Sciences; Business & Economics; Engineering; Law; Letters, Arts, & Social Sciences; Natural Resources; and Science. The program trains students to address complex water resources issues by building disciplinary depth in concert with multidisciplinary breadth to understand focused problems and communicate across disciplines. The concurrent J.D./M.S. may be completed in four years, and the J.D./Ph.D. may be completed in six years.

The College of Law advisor(s) for the concurrent degree in Water Resources is Professor Dylan Hedden-Nicely. Concurrent J.D./M.S./Ph.D. students may choose any of the three degree options:

• Water Resources Engineering & Science
• Water Resources Science & Management
• Water Resources Law, Management & Policy

Entrance into the program is highly competitive. Applicants must apply separately for admission to the College of Law and the College of Graduate Studies Water Resources Program, choosing one of the three degree options. Only after acceptance to each college may the student apply to the concurrent degree program. Decisions on admissions to the concurrent program are made by a steering committee consisting of the Director of the Water Resources Program, the College of Law’s Deans of Students, one non-law member of the Water Resources faculty, and one member of the Law faculty. Since the first year of study for the concurrent program must be exclusively in the College of Law, law students should apply for the program before or during 1L year.

J.D./M.S./Ph.D. students pay normal tuition and fees to the University of Idaho.

Each student shall have a graduate committee, which must meet the requirements of the College of Graduate Studies and must have at least one member from the College of Law faculty. The student and faculty committee will select courses appropriate to satisfy the requirements of the College of Graduate Studies and College of Law.

The M.S. in Water Resources requires 35 credits, consisting of 29 credits of course work and completion of a six-credit thesis. The Ph.D. in Water Resources requires 78 credits, consisting of 39 credits of course work and completion of 39 credits of research and dissertation.

The following courses are required of both J.D./M.S. and J.D./Ph.D. students:

- WR 501 Water Resources Seminar
- WR 506 Integrated Water Resources Methods
- WR 507 Integrated Water Resources Projects
- Core courses as specified for the particular Water Resources degree option.

Up to 12 graduate school credits are allowed toward the J.D. The courses must be approved by the student’s advisor in the College of Law, be complementary to an emphasis in water law, and enhance the candidate’s ability to serve clients and the legal profession in the area of water law. Graduate courses may not have equivalent substantive coverage to a course offered by the College of Law.

Up to six law credits are allowed toward the M.S. and up to nine credits toward the Ph.D. The following law courses are currently approved for credit toward the M.S. and Ph.D.:

- Law 906 Natural Resource Law Seminar (3)
- Law 907 Administrative Law (3)
- Law 938 International Environmental and Water Law (3)
- Law 939 Law, Science, and the Environment (2)
- Law 942 Water Law of the American West (3)
- Law 946 Water and Energy Policy Seminar (2)
- Law 947 Environmental Law (3)
- Law 948 Public Lands and Resources Law (3)
- Law 949 Native American Law (3)
- Law 951 Environmental Policy (3)
- Law 979 Native American Natural Resource Law (3)

5. J.D./PSM (Professional Science Masters in Natural Resources & Environmental Science) with University of Idaho Professional Science Masters Program

Please first read the information in Sections VIII.A. and B. (A) and (B) above concerning general information and academic conduct rules applicable to all concurrent degree applicants and students.

The concurrent J.D./PSM program offers students an opportunity to combine the study of both scientific and legal aspects of issues related to the environment and natural resources. This program equips students for jobs in which the technical knowledge offered through the Professional Science Masters Program and the professional expertise provided by the College of Law would be beneficial. The PSM is an interdisciplinary, non-thesis degree which combines rigorous study in science with training in management and communication skills. PSM graduates have the advanced scientific skills to work effectively with business, government, and industry.
Concurrent J.D./PSM students may choose from the following interdisciplinary PSM program tracks and must complete all the requirements for that track, including the science curriculum, professional skills courses, internship, elective course, and non-thesis research:

- Bioenergy and Bioproducts
- Environmental Contamination
- Sustainability Science
- Climate Change
- Water Resources Management
- Management of Regulated River Systems
- Ecohydrological Science and Management

The student must have a graduate committee, with at least one member of the committee being a faculty member of the College of Law.

The College of Law advisor(s) for the J.D./PSM is Professor Jerrold Long.

J.D./PSM students pay normal tuition and fees to the University of Idaho. In addition, every semester that students are in the J.D. program, they may take no fewer than 12 and no more than 18 credits without permission from the Deans of Students.

Students take the first year of study at the College of Law, following the regular 1L curriculum. Subsequent years of the concurrent degree program can be designed by the student and faculty advisor.

Up to 12 PSM graduate school credits are allowed towards the J.D.

Up to six credits from the following law courses are currently approved for credit toward the PSM:

- Law 947 Environmental Law (3)
- Law 948 Public Lands and Resources Law (3)
- Law 949 Native American Law (3)
- Law 951 Environmental Policy (3)
- Law 979 Native American Natural Resource Law (3)
- Other law courses as approved by the student’s PSM advisor and the PSM Program Director.

G. Concurrent Degree Programs Available in Both Moscow and Boise

1. J.D./MPA (Master of Public Administration) with the University of Idaho Department of Politics and Philosophy

Please read the information in Sections VIII (A) and (B) above concerning general information and academic conduct rules applicable to all concurrent degree applicants and students.

The concurrent J.D./MPA, offered in conjunction with the University of Idaho Department of Politics and Philosophy, offers the opportunity to combine the study of law and public administration to better prepare lawyers to serve in the public and non-profit sectors. Under the program, students may receive both the J.D. and the MPA in as few as six semesters. The MPA program is available live and online for students in Moscow and online for students in Boise.

The College of Law advisor(s) for the J.D./MPA is Associate Dean Richard Seamon. J.D./MPA students pay normal tuition and fees to the University of Idaho.

In every semester they take non-law courses, J.D./MPA students should fill out the Credit Reservation Request form indicating that the non-law courses should be recorded on the graduate transcript. Where a non-law course is also being used toward the J.D., check the law transcript box as well.

Up to 6 MPA credits are allowed toward the J.D. To receive this credit, a student must receive a grade of B or higher in an MPA course. Any of the courses in the MPA core curriculum can count toward the J.D. Please note, however, that students may not receive law credit for both Law 944 State and Local Government and PolS 565 Local Government Law. Students taking MPA courses online should be aware that any MPA credits taken by distance education will count toward the 21 distance credits maximum.

Up to 9 law credits are allowed toward the MPA; any of the courses in the J.D. curriculum can count toward the MPA. In addition, up to 6 credits in a non-profit or public service externship (Law 975 or Law 976) can count independently toward the J.D. and the MPA; these credits are not included in the 9-credit limit. For more information on the MPA, contact the Department of Politics and Philosophy.

X. Planning for Bar Admission

A. General Information

Every law student should plan to be admitted to the bar as soon as possible after graduation. This is true even for those who do not plan to enter the practice of law, for bar membership is regarded as a positive factor by many business, professional, and academic employers. Moreover, those who seek bar admission within a year of graduation are far more likely to pass the bar exam on the first attempt than those taking the bar exam later. Each U.S. jurisdiction (the 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, Guam, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Palau, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands) has its own rules for admission. To gain admission, applicants must have the requisite education, character and fitness, and competency to practice law as shown by the bar examination and other measures.

Every graduate of the University of Idaho College of Law has fulfilled the educational requirements for taking the bar exam in every U.S. jurisdiction.

Competency to practice law is primarily tested by the bar exam. In every jurisdiction except Louisiana, the bar exam consists of both essay and multiple-choice questions. Most jurisdictions also require applicants to perform simulated lawyering tasks. In addition, most states require applicants to pass a separately-administered professional responsibility exam.

Almost every U.S. jurisdiction administers the bar exam twice a year, in late February and late July. This allows law graduates to take the bar exam within three months of graduating from law school. Students should plan to take a commercial bar review course between graduation and the bar exam.

Bar review is a full-time job. Successful takers devote 50 or more hours a week to bar review the entire time between law school graduation and the bar exam. Although it is tempting to take a vacation following law school graduation, you should put this off until after the bar exam. In addition, working during the bar review period substantially decreases your chance of first-time bar passage.

B. Bar Applications

1. Bar Registration During 1L or 2L Year

A few jurisdictions require applicants to “register” for the bar during the first or second years of law school, long before bar applications are due. “Registration” varies from merely indicating an intention to sit for the bar to giving detailed character and fitness information. If students miss registration deadlines, they can still apply for the bar, but total fees are higher. Idaho and Washington, where most UI Law graduates sit for the bar, do not require law students to register before they submit bar applications.

If you know the state where you plan to sit for the bar, check the jurisdiction’s bar admissions web site to see if there is a registration requirement. The following states either require or encourage law students to register for the bar during 1L or 2L year: Alabama, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Texas.

2. UI Law Transcripts
Students ordering official transcripts as part of the bar application process may order the transcript before graduation. On the order form you should specify that the transcript should not be sent until the degree is posted; both the paper and online order forms have check boxes allowing this option. If you order a transcript which does not show your degree, you will have to submit an additional request and additional payment. Order transcripts through the University Registrar, www.uidaho.edu/registrar. The College of Law does not process, send, or request transcripts.

3. Enrollment / Degree Verification
UI Law students applying for the Idaho bar do not have to provide an enrollment verification. The Assistant Registrar–Law will forward a list of graduates to the Idaho State Bar; that list serves as the verification of enrollment for students applying for the Idaho bar only.

UI Law students applying for admission in any jurisdiction other than Idaho must read their bar application carefully and follow instructions as to enrollment verification. Some jurisdictions require you to provide a form directly to the law school; other jurisdictions directly request verification from law schools.

4. Completing the Bar Application During 3L Year
Anticipate that completing the bar application will take, at a minimum, one month. Bar applications are long and ask for detailed information; if you have not kept thorough records, answering the questions may require quite a bit of investigation and waiting for responses from record-keeping authorities. Read through your jurisdiction’s bar application at least one semester in advance and start filling out the bar application the first month of your last semester — August for December graduates, and early January for May graduates. Many jurisdictions do not allow late filing. Where late filing is permitted, late fees are typically $150 or more, up to $825.

5. Character and Fitness Inquiries
Each jurisdiction sets its own standards for, and conducts its own inquiry into, the character and fitness of bar applicants.

Although some character and fitness questions may appear to be probing, intrusive, or irrelevant, bar admissions authorities craft them to get the information needed to determine if the applicant can engage in the ethical practice of law. In addition, many jurisdictions offer conditional admission to applicants who may have histories of some behavior or condition, such as substance abuse or financial irregularity, which may pose a risk if not monitored. Character and fitness information, including the fact of conditional admission, is held in the strictest confidence and is not disclosed to members of the bar. Therefore, it is always better to give more information than needed than to risk not including all required information. The rule of thumb for character and fitness questions is “When in doubt, disclose.”

As part of its character and fitness investigation, each jurisdiction requests copies of bar applicants’ applications for law school admission. Thus, it is vital to ensure you disclosed all relevant character and fitness information on your law school application and that you updated your character and fitness information with any relevant information while attending UI Law. See Section I (H)(1–2).
Sometimes students are reluctant to take advantage of counseling or substance abuse treatment for fear they will have to report this when applying for the bar. It’s important to know that mental health and substance use issues are not a barrier to bar admission: indeed, according to the ABA, 25% of attorneys have anxiety or depression. Rather, bar admission authorities favorably view applicants who actively seek treatment for mental / emotional health issues or alcohol /substance abuse.

6. Notarizing the Bar Application.
Applicant signatures on bar applications must be notarized. UI Law offers notaries at the Clinic and Administration Office, in both Boise and Moscow. Please contact the office in advance to make sure a notary will be available when you come by.

C. Preparing for the Bar at UI Law

1. Bar Courses
To pass the bar exam, applicants must be proficient in legal analysis and also have a strong understanding of the doctrinal law tested on the bar exam. Students should have a strong background in bar-tested subjects before starting commercial bar review. Bar courses at University of Idaho can be divided into three categories: (a) bar courses required for the J.D., (b) important bar courses not required for the J.D., and (c) courses helpful for bar passage.

a. Bar Courses Required for the J.D.
The following courses, which teach critical doctrinal law and analytical skills, are required for graduation.
- Law 805 Civil Procedure and Introduction to Law (2)
- Law 806 Civil Procedure II (3)
- Law 807 Property (4)
- Law 809 Torts (4)
- Law 812 Criminal Law (3)
- Law 813 Contracts I (2)
- Law 814 Contracts II (3)
- Law 815 Legal Writing and Analysis (5) Essays comprise 50% of the points on the Uniform Bar Exam. Proficient written legal analysis is critical to bar exam success.
- Law 816 Constitutional Law I (3)
- Law 905 Constitutional Law II (3)
- Law 950 Evidence (3)
- Law 962 Professional Responsibility (3) — Professional responsibility is tested directly on the MPRE (required for admission in all jurisdictions except Wisconsin and Puerto Rico). In addition, professional responsibility concepts are sometimes tested on the Multistate Performance Test (“MPT”), which is part of the Uniform Bar Exam.

b. Important Bar Courses Not Required for the J.D.
While the following courses are not required for the J.D., they cover material that is heavily tested on the Uniform Bar Exam and the bar exams of most non-UBE jurisdictions.
- Law 919 Business Associations (4)
- Law 924 Sales (3)
- Law 925 Property Security (3)
- Law 941 Wills, Estates, and Trusts (3)
- Law 953 Criminal Procedure: Investigations (3)
c. Courses Helpful for Bar Passage.

The following courses (a) cover doctrinal material which, although covered on the bar exam, is not tested as heavily on the bar exam as the material in courses listed above, or (b) cover doctrinal material which, although tested on the bar exam, is more easily learned in a commercial bar review course, or (c) provide practice in skills tested heavily on the bar exam.

2. Bar Exam Success Toolkit

In addition to required and elective bar courses, the College supports its graduates’ bar success by offering a comprehensive suite of services and offerings under the “Bar Exam Success Toolkit.” Components of the toolkit include

- 1L and 2L/3L outlines, lectures, and practice questions provided by Barbri
- A study course for the MPRE
- AMP, a programmed learning platform for MBE subjects provided by Barbri
- Barbri commercial bar review course. Students pay only a fully refundable book deposit (currently $250) and the cost of shipping the books (currently less than $50).

3. Vandal Bar Success Program

University of Idaho law graduates are invited to participate in our free post-graduate Vandal Bar Success (VBS) Program to help prepare for the bar exam. The program is designed to complement your bar commercial course (e.g., Barbri) by offering substantive law workshops with actual bar exam problems, mock bar exams, one-on-one coaching, and other programming to support you in your bar studies. Look for details about the Vandal Bar Success Program in your final semester of law school. The program starts after graduation and operates parallel to your commercial course studies. Email law-barsuccess@uidaho.edu if you have any questions about the program.

D. Uniform Bar Examination (UBE)

1. General Information
The majority of U.S. jurisdictions have adopted the Uniform Bar Examination, including the states where most University of Idaho law graduates take the bar. Jurisdictions using the UBE agree to administer, grade, and score the three component tests uniformly: the MBE is weighted 50%, the MEE 30%, and the MPT 20%. The resulting score is portable; that is, the score a bar applicant receives in one UBE jurisdiction may be applied to another UBE jurisdiction, when transferred within the time limits of the receiving jurisdiction.

Each UBE jurisdiction sets its own passing scores, grades the writing components (MEE and MPT), and determines the time period within which it will accept a transfer UBE score. Because pass scores vary between jurisdictions, receiving a passing score in one state does not guarantee that the score will be sufficient to pass in another state. Applicants must apply separately and pay fees for admission to each jurisdiction, but those with passing scores need take the bar exam only once. In addition, any UBE state may also add state-specific requirements to its bar exam. For example, Washington bar applicants must pass both the UBE and the Washington Law Component, a timed open-book online test with Washington-specific law. (Non-UBE jurisdictions typically incorporate at least one of the three UBE components (Louisiana being the lone exception.) For more information, visit the website of the National Conference of Bar Examiners: \[\text{https://www.ncbex.org/}\].

2. Subjects Tested on the UBE
The following subjects are tested on the UBE:
- Business Associations (Agency, Partnership, Corporations, LLCs)
- Civil Procedure
- Conflict of Laws (“embedded” topic always tested with another subject)
- Constitutional Law
- Contracts and Sales (UCC Article 2)
- Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure
- Evidence
- Family Law
- Real Property
- Secured Transactions (UCC Article 9)
- Torts
- Trusts and Estates (Decedents’ Estates, Trusts, Future Interests)

3. Components of the UBE
The UBE consists of three multistate tests prepared by the National Conference of Bar Examiners: the 200-question multiple choice Multistate Bar Examination (MBE), six Multistate Essay Examination (MEE) questions, and two Multistate Performance Test (MPT) tasks.

a. Multistate Bar Examination (MBE) The multiple-choice MBE is a component of the bar exam in every U.S. jurisdiction except Louisiana and Puerto Rico. The MBE consists of 200 multiple-choice questions given over two 3-hour exam periods, and it accounts for 50% of the points on the Uniform Bar Exam and many other state exams.

The following subjects are tested on the MBE:
- Civil Procedure
- Constitutional Law
- Contracts and Sales (UCC Article 2)
• Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure
• Evidence
• Real Property
• Torts

b. Multistate Essay Examination (MEE) The MEE, consisting of short essay questions, is used as part of the bar exam in most U.S. jurisdictions, but the other jurisdictions typically have their own short essays written by their state authorities. Most jurisdictions using the MEE (and all UBE jurisdictions) administer six questions over the course of three hours, effectively giving 30 minutes per essay question.

The MEE tests on all subjects tested on the MBE, plus five additional subjects. Every law student should have a firm grounding in the subjects tested on the MEE: do not expect to be able to learn the subjects from scratch during the period between graduation and the bar exam. Even if your jurisdiction does not use the MEE, its state-prepared essays will test most or all of the MEE topics.

• Business Associations (Agency, Partnership, Corporations, LLCs)
• Civil Procedure
• Conflict of Laws (“embedded” topic always tested with another subject)
• Constitutional Law
• Contracts and UCC Article 2 (Sales)Sales (UCC Article 2)
• Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure
• Evidence
• Family Law
• Real Property
• Secured Transactions (UCC Article 9)
• Torts
• Trusts and Estates (Decedents’ Estates, Trusts, Future Interests)

c. Multistate Performance Test (MPT) The Multistate Performance Test (MPT), consisting of one or more 90-minute simulated lawyering tasks, is used as part of the bar exam in 49 U.S. jurisdictions. In addition, a few states draft their own performance tests. For each bar administration, the NCBE prepares two MPT problems. All states using the Uniform Bar Examination administer both MPT problems, but other MPT states can choose whether to administer one or two MPT problems on their bar exams.

The MPT requires finishing a specific lawyering task such as writing an objective memo, client letter, or persuasive brief; drafting a settlement agreement; or preparing a closing argument. To accomplish the task, the question will provide a “File” of facts in the form of client interview notes, contracts, and other documents, as well as a “Library” of potentially relevant law in the form of statutes, cases, or regulations. Therefore, applicants do not need to learn any doctrinal law to prepare for the MPT. During the exam, the applicant must apply the applicable given law to the relevant facts in the format required by the question. The performance test is designed to determine if the applicant can, within time constraints, pick out relevant facts and law, apply the law to the facts to resolve the client’s problem, identify ethical dilemmas if present, and communicate effectively in writing.
4. UBE Jurisdictions and Passing Scores

For the most up-to-date information on which jurisdiction administer the UBE, visit: https://www.ncbex.org/exams/ube/.

To view the most up-to-date minimum passing score for each UBE jurisdiction, visit: https://www.ncbex.org/exams/ube/score-portability/minimum-scores/.

E. Multistate Professional Responsibility Exam (MPRE)

The Multistate Professional Responsibility Exam (MPRE) is required for admission to the bar of all U.S. jurisdictions except Wisconsin and Puerto Rico. Although required for bar admission, the MPRE is not part of the bar exam itself. It requires a separate application and separate fees from the bar exam. The MPRE is administered three times a year in March, August, and November. Each jurisdiction establishes its own pass score for the MPRE.

The MPRE consists of 60 multiple-choice questions administered over the course of two hours. It tests understanding of professional conduct rules as found in the ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct, the ABA Model Code of Judicial Conduct, controlling constitutional decisions, and the generally accepted rules, principles, and common law regulating the legal profession.

For more information and registration, visit: https://ncbex.org/exams/mpre/.

F. Commercial Bar Review Courses

Each law graduate should take a comprehensive commercial bar review course to prepare for the bar exam.

Every College of Law student is provided a top comprehensive commercial bar review course upon graduation. Students pay only a fully refundable book deposit (currently $250) and the cost of shipping the books (currently less than $50).

We encourage students to compare bar review courses before making a final decision about which bar review to use. Carefully investigate the offerings of each bar review, considering not only the cost but the bar review course’s track record, longevity, compatibility with your learning style, and opportunities for guided feedback. Comprehensive bar review courses typically last approximately eight weeks. Look for courses which provide the following features:

- live or recorded lectures on doctrinal law
- explanatory outlines on doctrinal law
- suggested study schedules
- test-taking strategies
- 1,800 or more MBE-style questions, with comprehensive explanations of each right and wrong answer
- dozens of MEE-style essay questions covering every doctrinal subject tested on the exam, with model answers for several questions in each subject
- at least 15–20 MPT-style practice problems, with model answers
- individual feedback on MEEs and MPTs submitted for grading
- practice mini-bar exams to take under timed conditions

Beware of lesser-quality commercial bar review courses. Watch out especially for courses where the advertising consists primarily of testimonials, or where you must pay an additional charge for feedback on MEE and MPT problems.

G. Financing the Bar Review Period after Law School

The College has taken a major step to helping students with the cost of bar review by providing a commercial bar review course for every graduate (see Bar Exam Success Toolkit and Commercial Bar Review Courses, above.) However, you will face other expenses during the bar review period, typically including bar application fees of up to $1,000, living expenses, and travel expenses to sit for the exam. In addition, because bar review is a full-time job, you should not be employed during the period between graduation and taking the bar exam. It is important to start saving early because student loans are not available after graduation. Therefore, starting 1L year, you should begin setting aside $400–$500 per semester out of your financial aid package to finance bar application fees and expenses during the bar review period.

If you have not saved enough money during the three years of law school to cover bar preparation costs, you may consider taking out a loan. AccessLex can provide you with financial counseling. Two good sites for bar loan information are Penn State Law at https://pennstatelaw.psu.edu/admissions/jd-admissions/financial-aid/student-loans/bar-loans and Harvard Law at https://hls.harvard.edu/dept/sfs/bar-exam-loan-information/?redir=1. Currently, the following national lenders offer bar loans: Wells Fargo (for existing customers only), PNC, Discover Student Loans, and Sallie Mae. Bar loans typically carry higher interest rates than student loans, and most require co-signers. In addition, some graduates may not qualify for bar loans if they do not have a good credit rating.

In addition to bar loans and savings, consider secured or unsecured personal loans from a bank or credit union with which you have an established relationship.
