Research Development:

As part of the mission of the new Waters of the West program to develop team based interdisciplinary research in which faculty and students work together, the following research projects are under development:

Palouse Basin Water Supply Integrated Analysis, Spring 2007-2012

Analysis of means to achieve sustainable use of a declining sole-source interstate aquifer.

Lapwai Creek Watershed Integrated Analysis, Spring 2008-2012

Analysis of opportunities for, and barriers to, recovery of steelhead spawning and rearing habitat in a multi-jurisdictional watershed.

Additional research projects:

SESYNC Award 2013T5-006 "Social-Ecological System Resilience, Climate Change and Adaptive Water Governance" Fall 2013 - 2015

co-chairs: Barbara Cosens and Lance Gunderson, Dept. of Environmental Studies, Emory University

Referred to as the Adaptive Water Governance project for short, the project brings together an interdisciplinary group of legal scholars, ecologists, resilience scholars, social scientists, climate scientists and hydrologists from across the U.S. to explore the concept of Adaptive Governance in five north American water basins.

Universities Consortium on Columbia River Governance, 2007- 2024

University of Idaho representative on a core team from Oregon State University, University of Washington, University of Montana, University of Calgary and University of British Columbia, developing research to inform re-negotiation of the Columbia River Treaty between the United States and Canada. The treaty comes up for re-consideration in 2014.
