

The McClure Center and Department of Political Science & Philosophy is delighted to announce this new undergraduate research opportunity:

The Department of Politics and Philosophy is seeking applicants for the McClure Legislative Research (MLR) Internship for the 2019 Idaho legislative session. MLR Interns will conduct research on issues being discussed during the session, engage with the University of Idaho McClure Center for Public Policy Research, and submit reports on their work to state legislators. Research can be done remotely, and interns will give regular updates to the internship coordinator at the University of Idaho, Professor Brian Ellison. MLR Interns will receive a paid trip to Boise during the session to visit the McClure Center and tour the Idaho State Capitol. Students will receive three credits for POLS 459 (Legislative Internship) for their work. The Department plans to offer two MLR Internships for the 2019 session. Interested students should contact Professor Brian Ellison (bellison@uidaho.edu).
