Courses Developed:

Seminar: Government & Public Law, LAW 901 (co-taught) (Fall 2019)

Along with five colleagues, I developed the idea for and then co-taught a seminar introducing students to different career paths and contemporary substantive legal issues in government and public law, primarily through inviting to class a series of guest speakers with a wide range of experiences in these areas.

Advanced Criminal Procedure: Adjudications (University of Idaho College of Law)

I proposed and began teaching this course as a LAW 901 temporary course in Fall 2015 and Fall 2016. In Fall 2016, I co-wrote and submitted a successful proposal to the Curriculum Committee and law faculty to permanently add this course to the curriculum.

The Death Penalty in America (Loyola University New Orleans College of Law)

I designed a seminar, using my own course material, focusing on the administration and legal regulation of the death penalty in America since the 1970s.
