SUBJECT:	UI Conducting Search for Chief Information Officer

For the last two years, I have served as the vice president for Infrastructure and the chief information officer for the University of Idaho.

Now, in order to best move the university forward in achieving its strategic goals, we are seeking to hire a full-time chief information officer (CIO). The new CIO will report to me and will oversee the recently restructured Information Technology Services area.

The search for a CIO is now underway. The search committee is being chaired by Cami McClure, executive director of Events and Support Services. She and her committee have an aggressive hiring timeline, and I'd like to thank them for their time, commitment and leadership.

The committee is excited about the robust and highly qualified CIO applicant pool. We strongly encourage you to come meet the CIO finalists when they visit campus for interviews.

Here's the hiring timeline:

- Now until mid-October: Applicant screening and initial interviews.
- End of October: Selected candidates invited to UI campus for in-person interviews with committee and university community.
- Early January: New CIO starts position.

More information about the search, including the schedule of open forums, will be sent out as soon as it is available.

We look forward to having a new CIO join our Vandal community.
